Discontent, fears divide Kirkwood on election eve

By JOHN CAMPBELL
Press-Citizen Reporter

On the eve of elections for two seats on the Kirkwood Community College board of directors, Kirkwood is a college divided.

Discontent among some faculty and staff focuses on a thorough revision recently of vocational programs by top administrators and the board. Administrators thought they had finished hashing out those changes last December.

But interviews with more than a dozen faculty, staff and administrators found that some claim their views on the changes were never considered.

Those staff members question whether top administrators, particularly Kirkwood President William Stewart, are straying from the college's primary role as a conduit to the marketplace through job training.

Moreover, many of those faculty and staff interviewed say they have stopped discussing proposed policy changes in public, for fear of being fired or demoted if they get a reputation for "rocking the boat." Stewart, an imposing, voluble product of the community college system in the Pacific Northwest, came from Alaska five years ago to take over the top job at Kirkwood. His supporters say Stewart tends to be in the center of most controversial issues there because he moves swiftly and forcefully to carry out his ideas.

To others, however, Stewart's rule is too rigid. They say he tries to stifle all criticism of his policies, no matter how valid the criticism.

"Bill Stewart will stop at nothing to get back at somebody who crosses him," says one Kirkwood employee who requested anonymity.

Ray Mullen, a pottery and humanities instructor since Kirkwood opened in 1966, says that in the past several years "a tone of fear and paranoia" has crept into the lives of Kirkwood staff.

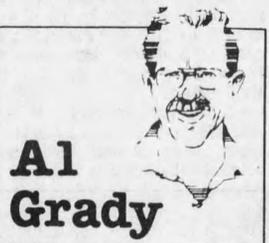

Mullen emphasizes that he has always considered Kirkwood an excellent place to work and a successful vehicle for improving students' lives. But he laments that the freedom given to instructors in the classroom does not extend to discussions about major shifts in academic policy.

"Are the faculty being listened to? If not, why not? There's little direct communication between faculty and administration, except through obscure channels."

Norm Nielsen, Kirkwood vice-president for instruction, dismisses the rumblings as coming from a small group of the college's 500 full-time employees who are "disgruntled" about recent

The Hawks that Hayden hath wrought

What hath Hayden Fry wrought?

What Hayden Fry hath wrought is a good football team that might become a very good football team that could become an outstanding football team.

That's what Hayden Fry hath wrought.

Anyone who saw Saturday's game at Iowa State, live or on TV, had to be very, very impressed with the Hawkeyes.

No Iowa team has scored 50 or more points against anyone (other than Northwestern) since way back in 1969 when the Hawks beat outmanned Washington State, 61-35.

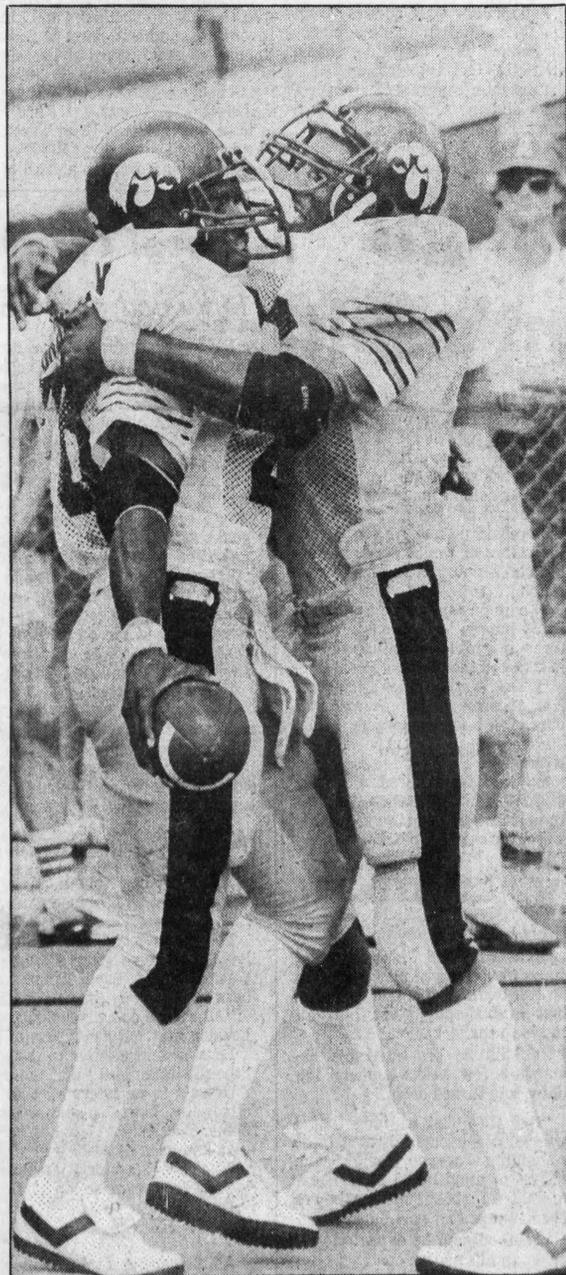

In the wake of the game, the two most appropriate questions would appear to be: 1) Is Iowa that good, or, 2) Is Iowa State that bad?

Some of both, perhaps. No doubt Iowa helped Iowa State LOOK that bad. We'll have a much better idea about two weeks from today.

For a first game, it's hard to figure how things could have gone much better for the Hawks. The game was won much more decisively than anyone could have imagined, both the offense and the defense looked sensational, or thereabouts, and Hayden and his staff got to play their entire traveling squad, and not just in the final seconds. That's the kind of stuff that gets Nebraska where it is.

While Owen Gill, and others, get wide acclaim for their running ability — which they should — let's not overlook the fact that this might be the best offensive line ever to play at Iowa, and that's saying quite a mouthful. From Joel Hilgenberg through Jon Roehlk and Tim Hanna and John Alt and Joe Levelis, that's a pro-

Neuhauser won't seek re-election

By LYLE MULLER
Press-Citizen Reporter

Iowa City Mayor Mary Neuhauser, a member of the Iowa City Council for nine years, announced today that she will not seek another term.

Her decision means that Iowa City voters will send at least three new members to the council when they vote this November. Councilmen John Balmer and Lawrence Lynch said earlier this summer that they would not seek new terms, which run for four years.

The other incumbent, councilman David Perret, has been vacationing and has not announced his re-election plans.

"I had always planned that I was not going to run again," Neuhauser said today. But she delayed making an announcement, she said, because her friends and supporters tried to convince her to seek another term on the council.

Neuhauser represented council District C during her entire tenure on the council.

"I think that I've served long enough," said Neuhauser, 50, of 914 Highwood St. "I have no specific plans at all, and I'll have to say that, hopefully, by January I'll know more."

Since she was first appointed to the council in 1975, Neuhauser has been an active voice in local, state and national government. She is completing a one-year term as president of the Iowa League of Municipalities. She previously was vice president of the organization, which represents about 900 city governments in Iowa.

Neuhauser also has served on the board of directors of the Na-

Druse, Lebanese clash in mountain regions

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian-backed Druse insurgents clashed with Lebanese army troops under fierce artillery fire in Lebanon's central mountains today.

Beirut was shaken by the rumbling of artillery throughout the night, but spokesmen for the U.S., French, Italian and British contingents of the multinational peace-keeping force reported no fighting near their zones.

Maj. Robert Jordan, spokesman for the 1,200-man Marine contingent at the international airport, today said an amphibious task force of about 2,000 Marines arrived off the Lebanese coast.

The additional forces were ordered to the eastern Mediterranean by President Reagan as a back-up for the original contingent in the event of future attacks.

The Red Cross said it was sending relief convoys to the Chouf mountain town of Deir Al-Kamar to help 30,000 besieged Christians. It said Druse commanders agreed to let the mercy caravan through after a three-day ban.

Army communiques said its units repulsed several overnight Druse assaults, backed by Palestinian guerrillas, on the key town Souk El-Gharb in the Aley mountains above Beirut and pounded insurgent positions around Shweifat on the southern edge of the capital.

An army communique said two Lebanese soldiers and at least two Palestinian guerrillas were killed in battles at Souk El-Gharb on Sunday, but Western military sources said a crack U.S.-trained unit was overrun with 14 Lebanese soldiers killed, 28 wounded and 28 others missing in hand-to-hand fighting.

Druse communiques said Christian forces had been driven from 85 percent of the Aley and Chouf mountain areas since the fighting began Sept. 4, when Israeli troops abandoned positions in the mountains for a more secure defense line to the south at the Awali River.

From its military command in Tel Aviv, the Israeli army announced that three soldiers were wounded by a hand grenade and light arms fire in an attack during the night Sunday in southern Lebanon.

It was the first attack on Israeli forces behind the new Awali River defense line, set up when the army pulled out of Lebanon's central mountains Sept. 4 and left Druse and Christian forces locked in a battle for control of the area.

On Sunday, U.S. and British jets flew over the capital Sunday in a show of force, as mortar shells fell around bunkers sheltering U.S. Marines at the international airport. There were no casualties.

Congress shoves aside budget for Lebanon, jetliner tragedy

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Legislators are eagerly lining up to vent their anger at the Soviet Union for shooting down a South Korean jetliner and air their concerns about the continued presence of U.S. Marines in Lebanon as Congress gets back to work after a five-week recess.

Anxieties about record budget deficits and a crowded agenda of fiscal and domestic issues, including a list of money bills that require action before the Oct. 1 start of the new fiscal year, also faced members of the House and Senate gearing up today for a final legislative burst before the coming election year.

But the focus early this week will be on the Soviet Union and one of its interceptors that on Sept. 1 destroyed a South Korean jumbo jet carrying 269 people, including 61 Americans. Among the passengers was Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga.

"Rhetoric is the most important thing we can do sometimes and our words, in this case, are our real instrument of retaliation," Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said Sunday. "People (legislators) will be vying for the opportunity to be indignant, and they should."

Early business also included eulogies today for McDonald and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who had 42 years' experience in Congress and died of a ruptured coronary artery at his home in Everett, Wash., a few hours after denouncing the Soviet attack at a news conference.

Dan Evans, former Republican governor of Washington, was to be sworn in today as Jackson's successor. Evans was appointed by the state's GOP governor, John Spellman, to serve until a special election Nov. 8 in which Evans will be a candidate.

3rd body found off coast near jet crash

By K.P. HONG
Associated Press Writer

WAKKANAI, Japan — Gale winds washed a third body believed from the downed South Korean airliner onto Japan's northeast coast today, and the nation's leaders warned of new sanctions unless Moscow admitted it should not have shot down the jumbo jet.

Police in Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, found the headless body on the Sea of Okhotsk coast near Monbetsu, 160 miles southeast of where the Boeing 747 is believed to have crashed into the sea off the Soviet island of Sakhalin.

The body was too mutilated for even the sex to be determined.

The Maritime Safety Agency reported a second find today, a piece of flesh believed to be from a human back that was found in a salmon fisherman's net off Monbetsu. In all, searchers have retrieved more than 420 objects believed to have come from the destroyed Boeing 747.

In Washington, the State Department conceded the attacking Soviet jet may have fired warning shots before launching a deadly missile. And in Moscow, a Soviet general claimed the jet fighter's pilot could not have distinguished tional League of Cities and that organization's Community Development Steering Committee.

She's been a member of a federal task force on housing costs, chairwoman of a federal committee on land supply and development, and chairwoman of an organization called Women in Government. As part of her official duties, Neuhauser testified before Senate and House committees in Washington.

Last spring, Neuhauser graduated from the University of Iowa College of Law. She said today she'll need more time "if I am going to practice law, or whatever it is I'm going to do."

Neuhauser said she leaves the council with a feeling that, while she served, several projects that needed attention got it. Among them are the near-completion of Iowa City's downtown urban renewal project, obtaining the government grant money necessary for the project and other improvement programs, construction of a new library and housing for elderly residents, and establishment of a new Senior Citizens Center, she said.

Neuhauser also said she thinks that during her tenure the council has evolved from a forum of sometimes strict partisan bickering to a group that can forge a consensus by compromise. "I feel real good about what these councils have been able to put together," she said.

Congress shoves aside budget

Baker, speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," also said a bipartisan "statement of outrage and indignation against barbaric actions by the Soviet Union" would be introduced in the Senate and voted on Wednesday. A House vote also is expected this week.

Attention will be given to the lack of say from Congress in the deployment of 1,200 U.S. Marines in Lebanon and their recent casualties resulting from the continued civil war between religious factions there.

Some lawmakers have said President Reagan has failed to comply with the spirit of the 1973 War Powers Act that would limit the stay of the Marines to a maximum of 90 days — an initial 60 days and a possible 30-day extension — unless Congress approved.

Democratic leaders in the House and Senate, though, have indicated they want the debate to take place under the War Powers Act.

Meanwhile, Congress is returning to face a persistent legislative gridlock with the White House over how to reduce budget deficits.

Before the recess, Congress postponed from July 22 to Sept. 23 the deadlines it had set for itself to achieve budget savings called for in the budget blueprint enacted earlier this year — increased revenues of $73 billion over the next three years and spending cuts for existing programs by $12.3 billion over the same period. Complicating the situation is the approach of the 1984 elections and the reluctance of Democrats or Republicans to allow themselves to be painted as the instigators of the politically unpleasant solutions for budget deficits — higher taxes or reduced domestic spending.

The most immediate fiscal concerns facing Congress are the annual appropriations bills that are supposed to be in place by the beginning of the fiscal year Oct. 1.

So far, only four of the 13 necessary bills have been passed by Congress and signed into law.

The Hawkeyes that Hayden hath wrought like line in both size and quickness. If they stay healthy, there's no telling how far they may take this team.

Chuck Long was his usual cool and brilliant self, starting off as if to raise his school record for passing accuracy and wisely eating the ball when necessary. Tom Grogan looked very efficient in relief, and so did Cory Robertson, who was humming that football in the final minutes.

Gill was super, but Eddie Phillips will match him stride for stride when fully healthy. Full-back Norm Granger may have been the most underrated man on the field in terms of running, blocking and pass receiving. And Fred Bush is going to be heard from this year and next.

No less than 10 receivers caught the 16 Iowa pass completions, and maybe the play of the day was the leaping reception by Ronnie Harmon along the east sideline in the first half. And wasn't it great to see long-suffering Lon Olejniczak get in the game and making a diving catch at the Cyclone one that almost produced a touchdown?

The heroes were many on defense, too. It's difficult to assess the strength of the Iowa State offense, but on this opening day the question-marked middle of the Iowa defensive line acquitted itself better than we might have expected. Dave Strobel was outstanding at defensive end, but Tony Wancket wasn't far behind. Iowa's linebackers made their presence felt all day, and maybe the best of the bunch on this day was Erric Hedgman, although one had the feeling the Cyclones wisely stayed away from Larry Station as much as possible.

If there was one area which may have been a little less than Hayden might have desired, I'd guess it was the pass defense. It seemed to me that Iowa State was getting a lot of receivers open in Iowa's backfield. Not only did the Cyclones complete a lot of passes, but they had a number of targets open who either dropped the ball (one in the end zone) or were overthrown. With a veteran group of defensive backs two deep, I suspect that's an area where immediate improvement can be expected.

Maybe the brightest spot of the game was the punt returning of freshman sprinter Robert Smith. The kid from Texas returned six punts for 97 yards and almost busted a couple, which I'll bet he does before the season is over. Know how far Iowa returned punts all of last season? Twenty-three returns for 60 yards! The speedy Smith also showed two very important things for a guy back there under punts — he can catch the ball, and he can take a hit.

Roehl got off to a poor start on kickoffs, but thanks to a lot of practice began to boom 'em into the end zone as the rout progressed. Tommy Nichol didn't get a lot of punting practice, but seemed only modestly effective, although his 35-yard average isn't bad, considering two were "pooches," one downed at the Cyclone two.

I guess the thing to keep in mind right now is that if Hayden said Hawk fans shouldn't get too "low" after last year's distressing loss to Iowa State, they shouldn't get too "high" after Saturday's historic romp.

Directly ahead is Penn State, then Big Ten co-favorite Ohio State. One assumes Iowa is going to have to be better than it was at Ames to beat either one.

You just know the Hawks are walking into a (Nittany) Lions' den this Saturday at Not-So-Happy-Valley, Pa. You know of Iowa's amazing revival last year between games two and three once it got its quarterback problems straightened out. Coach Joe Paterno of the defending national champs probably will relish a big challenge out of the Big Ten this week to jump right back into the national spotlight.

There's no doubt that it's a great task for the Hawks. They're meeting a cornered team with great personnel fighting for its life. But if Hayden Fry is worried about Penn State's personnel and tradition and mood, I'd say Paterno has a worry or two also after last Saturday.

And not just about his own team.

the airliner from a U.S. spy plane.

The Soviet jet shot down Korean Air Lines Flight 007 on Sept. 1 off the Soviet island of Sakhalin, north of Japan's northernmost island of Hokkaido. The 269 people aboard the airliner are presumed killed.

The State Department said a careful review of tape recordings revealed a Soviet pilot reported firing of bursts of tracer shells minutes before the airliner was downed.

The State Department announcement said the attack remained inexcusable. "The fact is that it was an unarmed, civilian airliner, and it cost the lives of 269 innocent people," it said.

In Moscow, Col. Gen. Nikolai Moskvilitev claimed the Boeing 747 and U.S. RC-135 spy planes have "an identical form and geometric dimensions."

The RC-135 is 136 feet long while the airliner is 231 feet long. The spy plane also has a much narrower wing span, a sharper nose and lacks the 747's distinctive forward hump.

Moskvilitev, head of fighter aviation for the Soviet air-defense command, nonetheless insisted Soviet pilots could not distinguish between the two types of plane at night.

In Tokyo, Foreign Ministry officials said Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Pavlov was warned that Japan would impose new retaliatory measures if Moscow persisted in claiming it was not to blame for the attack.

Pavlov said Moscow regrets measures already taken and fears they will further strain Japan-Soviet relations, the officials said. The Soviets maintain the airliner was on a spy mission for the U.S. and ignored orders to land.

Japan last Friday banned "for the time being" charter flights by the Soviet airline Aeroflot. Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, in a meeting this morning with Irish Foreign Minister Peter Barry, said Japan was preparing to join European nations that have agreed to a two-week ban on all Aeroflot flights.

And today, Belgium became the latest European nation to agree to the two-week ban, which will affect the twice-weekly Aeroflot flights between Brussels and Moscow.

In Switzerland, however, the Swiss national airline Swissair and the Department of Transportation deferred a decision on joining the boycott pending action by other airlines. The delay left Swissair pilots angry but resigned to go ahead with flights today and Tuesday, according to a spokesman for the pilots.

Also today, a pack of six Soviet vessels searched near Moneron, a tiny island off southwest Sakhalin where the jumbo jet is believed to have gone down, the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency said. The Soviets have not disclosed any details of their search and bar other vessels from Soviet waters.

Police in Hokkaido said a large piece of flesh turned up today in fishermen's nets off Monbetsu, in the Sea of Okhotsk about 160 miles from the spot southeast of Sakhalin.

Last Thursday, the badly mutilated body of a child was recovered along the same coast. On Sunday, a fisherman recovered the faceless, legless corpse of a Caucasian woman and two pieces of flesh were found in the area.

Authorities today said neither the child nor the woman had been identified, but it was almost certain they were among those aboard the plane when it was shot down.

About 850 police and volunteers are searching the shoreline, while 23 vessels and 11 aircraft are scanning coastal waters, police and Maritime Safety Agency officials said. Plane parts, a blouse, pocketbook, shoes and an identification card for a Canadian passenger, 25-year-old Mary Hendrie, are among the items found so far.

Who expected Hawks to be this good?

'Our game rated good to outstanding,' says Fry

By NOLAN ZAVORAL
Press-Citizen Sports Editor

AMES — He walked in the swirl and trot of coaches and players leaving the field after Iowa's 51-10 pasting of Iowa State here Saturday.

Kirk Ferentz, Iowa's offensive line coach, squinted into a sky suddenly ablaze with sun after a four-hour stay of gray, and he said of the victory, "We saw some of this coming. We knew they (the offensive linemen) were ready. We knew we'd be good."

He smiled. "But not this good." The euphoria of an opening victory — over Iowa State, yet; on regional television, yet — still ran thick as a good malt through the Hawk camp Sunday, even with Penn State on-deck in a week. There.

In his Sunday morning remarks to the media through a telephone conference call, Iowa coach Hayden Fry found little to fault and little in the way of injury from the Ames game.

"All phases of our game I would rate good to outstanding," the coach said. "Particularly our offensive and defensive lines, which performed well for most of the game. Whatever mistakes we made were overcome with super effort and hustle."

"I was particularly pleased with the defensive line, because we don't have the returning starters there we do on offense (two vs. five). We anticipated a good game from our offensive line with five starters."

Fry also cited "the running backs and fullbacks" — meaning four-touchdown Owen Gill and Norm Granger — for "running tough and blocking tough." Not to mention quarterback Chuck Long, 13 of 17 passing, 204 yards, 1 touchdown, no interceptions.

And, finally, Robert Smith, the frosh from Big D who did well on Big Rs (returns): 6 punt returns for 97 yards, including 32 on his first. "As time goes by, you're going to see more and more of him," Fry said. "He's got great potential."

As for injuries, the coach reported that no one would be visiting the surgeon because of anything that happened Saturday — even nose guard Hap Peterson, who injured a leg and had to be carried off the field by two teammates.

Five players will be held out of practices this week, Fry said, and "one or two" may miss the Penn State game. (As usual, Fry would not name the injured players.) Still, he implied that this was about an injury-free an opener as he has had at Iowa.

The win over Iowa State, on a damp field, before a damp crowd of 50,066, broke a three-game Cyclone hex on Iowa. Hawkeye offensive guard Jon Roehlk, hav-

Hawks set, tie records

Four individual and series records were broken or tied Saturday in Ames in Iowa's 51-10 win over Iowa State:

- Iowa placekicker Tom Nichol, making his first four extra-points, tied the school record of 42 in a row set by Bob Prescott from 1956-58. Nichol said he slipped on the rain-slick surface on his one miss in the game, coming on his fifth attempt. He made two extra-points after that.
- Iowa running back Owen

Gill, scoring four touchdowns on runs of 31, 2, 1 and 3 yards, tied an Iowa game record held by Larry Lawrence (in the Minnesota game in 1968) and Dennis Mosley (against Indiana, 1979).

- The 51-10 final was the most lopsided score of the 31-game series, replacing Iowa's 45-7 win over the Cyclones in 1912.
- The 61 combined points were the most scored in the series, exceeding the 52 points scored in Iowa's 45-7 win in 1912.

Iowa State coach Jim Criner, handed his worst loss in 20 years of coaching, called it a "team loss," involving both players and coaches. He called Iowa an "outstanding football team" without weakness, but elsewhere in the Cyclone camp there seemed no rush to praise the victors.

Linebacker Chris Washington, blaming breakdowns in offensive and defensive execution, said, "It was a case of us stopping ourselves."

Having nothing to do with Iowa? he was asked.

"No," he said firmly.

The 16th-ranked Hawkeyes travel Saturday to State College, Pa., to meet Penn State, the defending national champs who have slumped to a 0-2 record. The Nittanians opened with a 44-6 loss to Nebraska in someplace called New Jersey, and then lost Saturday at home to the University of Cincinnati, 14-3.

"I don't guess (Penn State coach) Joe Paterno has ever had three straight losses," Fry said Sunday, guessing correctly. "I know he's scratching his head, and he's worried."

"They've lost, what, four games in Happy Valley (State College) in the last seven years (more like nine times). They'll turn it around — I just hope it isn't against us."

"We'll be in for it this week," Fry went on. "We'd be in for it, anyway, but now we'll really be in for it."

Hawks, negatives swarm Archer

By DAVE HYDE
Press-Citizen Sportswriter

AMES — Surrounded, as was his fate all afternoon, Iowa State quarterback David Archer tried to think positively. But the negative kept crashing in.

There was his negative 13-yard carry on his first series. His two negative 10-yard scrambles in the second quarter. In all, there were his seven rushes for minus 17 yards.

"They came at me, they blitzed, more than I expected and I had to eat the ball too much," Archer said to a pocket of reporters Saturday following his Cyclones' 51-10 thumping.

"I think we got in some long-distance situations early in the game that gave them the opportunity to really come at us and our offense never really could get on track after that. Iowa picked the right times to tee-off," he said.

Indeed, on the Cyclones' first possession Archer faced a third-and-12 situation and Iowa's Paul Hufford chased him down for a 10-yard loss.

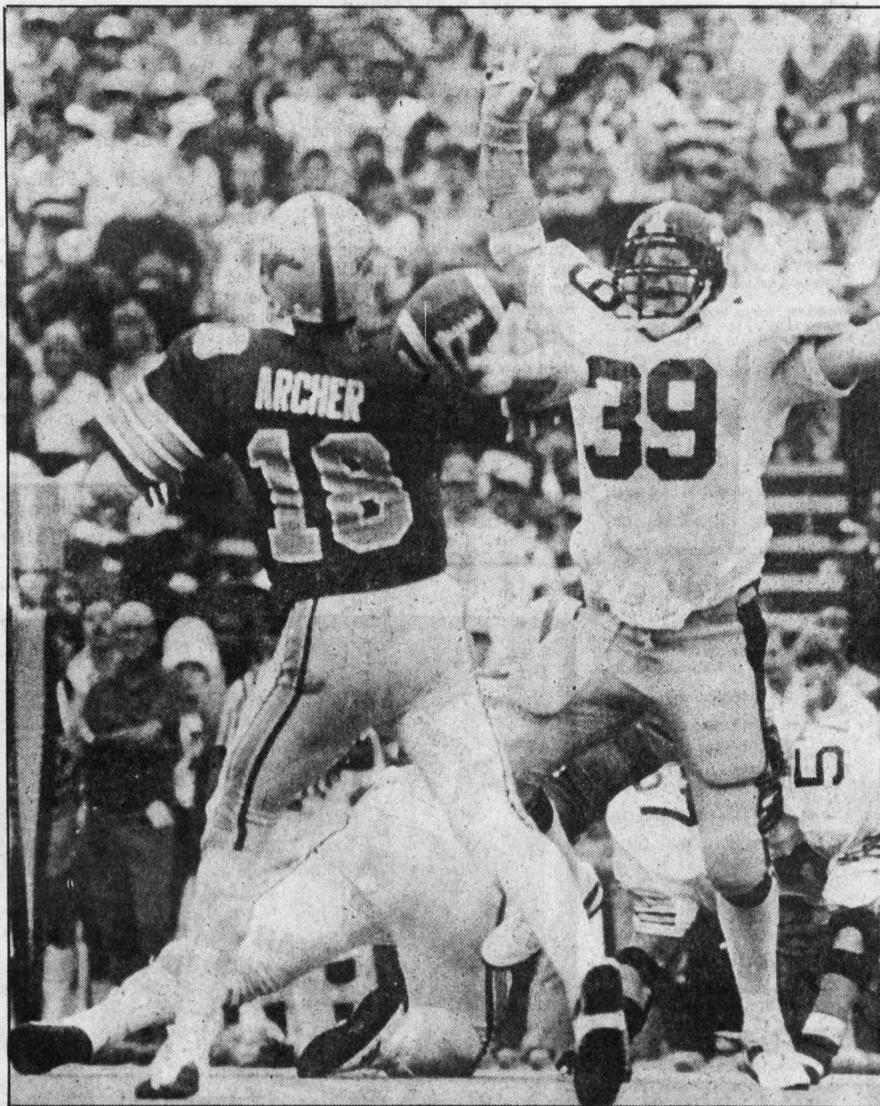

Such action answered questions for the Hawkeyes. The only untested commodities returning from a defense that led the Big Ten in 1982 were on the line where three of the five linemen were starting their first game.

On Saturday, operating against a Cyclone offensive line that featured just one returning starter, the defensive question mark was answered. The Hawkeyes gave up 85 yards rushing and, while Archer passed for 158 yards, not much of it mattered after Iowa opened up a 24-0 lead early in the second quarter.

"We wanted to get them in a situation where they became predictable and we could pin our ears back and rush," said Iowa tackle George Little, a junior who had his first start Saturday. "They had a young line and we wanted to come at them early and confuse them so they wouldn't get their confidence."

The Cyclones didn't get much of anything in the game. Iowa State put together a drive late in the second quarter that gave them a first-and-goal at the 5-yard line, but Archer was sacked back at the 19. Mike Bachrodt came on to kick a field goal that appeared as if it would be the Cyclones' only points until Mike Posey grabbed a 65-yard touch-

Iowa State quarterback David Archer in the Hawkeye's 51-10 win in Ames Saturday. Archer was sacked four times in the intrastate rivalry, which the Hawkeyes won for the first time in four years.

Paterno is too worried to think about Hawkeyes

From staff reports and The Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Penn State football coach Joe Paterno apparently has so many worries about his own team that he hasn't thought much about the game here Saturday against 16th-ranked Iowa.

After a 14-3 upset loss to the University of Cincinnati here last Saturday, to make Penn State 0-2, Paterno said, "Anybody we play right now is a good football team."

They're (Iowa) going to be very tough for us. But because of our situation, I haven't done much thinking about Iowa."

Penn State, the defending national champions ranked 20th last week, has scored only one touchdown in its first two games. The Nittany Lions opened with a 44-6 loss to No. 1 Nebraska.

Cincinnati, under new coach Watson Brown, recovered two fumbles and drove for both its scores in the second quarter. Penn State, a three-touchdown favorite, managed only a 39-yard field goal by Nick Gancitano in the third quarter.

It was the first time since Paterno took over at Penn State in 1966 that he had lost his first two games.

Iowa won its opener Saturday in Ames against intrastate rival Iowa State, 51-10.

In victory, Gill is a 'vicious' gentleman

AMES — Owen Gill, ever the proper Englishman, strode up and down the Iowa bench here Saturday, thanking his linemen for their blocks that sprang him for one of his four touchdowns.

A slap on the back here, a grasped hand there, a politician in pads.

By all accounts, the patter of the junior Hawkeye running back from London by way of Brooklyn, New York, went:

"Thanks a lot for the holes. Keep up the good work."

"Keep up the good work?" "That's what he said," offensive guard Jon Roehlk said, unsurprised by Gill's formality. "You know, backs like the idea of running around and not getting hurt."

Saith Gill, "The offensive line makes things happen for me. They do a great job. I go nowhere otherwise."

Yet, there is another side to the decorous Owen Gill, who tied an Iowa record with his four scores and finished with 136 yards in 16 carries in a 51-10 win over Iowa State.

Presenting the "vicious" Owen Gill.

"Owen is always improving. I've never seen him play just an average game," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said Sunday. "This season, what he's really improved on is his viciousness . . . or his toughness running. He's always run hard and nifty for a big guy. But I wouldn't use that adjective ('nifty') to really describe how he's looked in fall camp."

No, Fry would use tough.

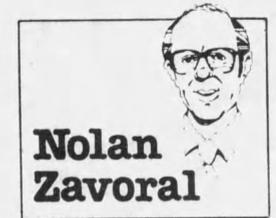

He went on about the 6-foot-2 inch, 220-pounder: "He's just so big and strong. Imagine what a defensive back thinks when Owen gets loose in the secondary. It's a complete mismatch."

Let us take a defensive back, then, like left cornerback Alvin Baker of Iowa State, all 6 feet and 188 pounds of him: how is it trying to tackle the man they call the Baby Bull?

"Like on sweeps, he comes around the corner real good," Baker said. "Comes real hard. I mean hard. And big as he is, he's still got a lot of moves. First he'll go straight ahead, then lateral, then straight."

"And he'll hit you if you stay and wait for him. Uh-huh. Yes, he will. He's not afraid."

Gill is just your typical 220-pound running back born of West Indian parents who came with them to this country at age 16 and didn't take up football until his last two years at Tilden High School in Brooklyn. He started out as defensive and offensive lineman until convincing his coach he would be happier — and the team better off — if he carried the ball.

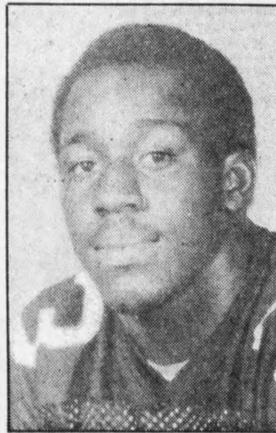

The college scouts began noticing him, including those in Iowa City. "Iowa was on the ball. They followed up. They wrote a lot of letters," Gill said.

He decided to come to Iowa City, along with two other Tilden football players named Devon Mitchell and Nate Creer, now in the Iowa secondary.

Gill, a triple-jumper in track, played fullback a little last season when Norm Granger was hurt — and would again this season in a similar situation, Fry said. As it is, Gill is locked in a fight for the running back position with Eddie Phillips, who injured a thigh against Iowa State.

"He (Gill) has to be good or he

"The offensive line makes things happen for me."

Connors wins fifth Open title by strangling Lendl

By GREG BOECK
Gannett News Service

NEW YORK — There are those who will say that Ivan Lendl choked in grand slam fashion again Sunday in losing the 102nd U.S. Open to Jimmy Connors, 6-3, 6-7, 7-5, 6-0.

Lendl's specialty — the big serve that had served him so faithfully in this tournament — failed him because he had one hand on his racket, and the other wrapped around his throat at set point in the game-winning second set.

But the Czechoslovakian didn't run his record of futility to 0-for-15 in Grand Slam events because he choked in the final of the world's richest tennis tournament.

Rather, he got strangled by the gutsiest tennis player in the world. Connors played tough despite his physical problems. After the seventh game in the second set, he had to leave the court because he was sick. He confirmed later he had diarrhea.

After the seventh game of the third set, he started to noticeably limp. He passed over it later as a sprained toe, but there were pre-match whispers that his right ankle was hurting badly.

Finally, he was just one lethal Lendl serve away from dropping the third set, and falling behind, 1-2.

But Connors limped and sweated and battled and grunted his way back after Lendl fatally wounded himself by double-faulting, and not only won over another New York crowd of 20,000 Jimmy lovers, but his fifth Open and the $120,000 winner's share.

This was a rematch of last year's final that Connors also won, and it was a bitter reminder for Lendl that he still hasn't won a big one.

He's now reached the final of three Grand Slam events, and lost each time, tarnishing his otherwise brilliant career.

"I will say the same thing I've said before," Lendl said. "I will be back next year at Wimbledon and the French and here and I will be trying again."

Connors broke Lendl's serve 10 times, but Lendl still proved to be his own worst enemy. The double fault at set point in the third devastated him.

"I never really recovered mentally from having double-faulted," Lendl admitted. "The wind got a little hold of my toss. I should have caught the ball and tossed it up again."

But he didn't.

"He double-faulted and I said, 'Well, if he's going to do that, he's going to give me a chance,'" said Connors. "I started getting in there and jumping on my returns more. I won that game and my spirits lifted about 50, 60 percent and I think his dropped a little from that point."

Connors won the first set with two service breaks, and had just broken Lendl's serve in the second to pull to within 3-4 when he sud-

He was gone six minutes and admitted later he had diarrhea.

Connors returned, and sent the set into tiebreaker, but lost it, 7-2.

Lendl was also leading the third set, 4-3, when Connors started limping after almost every point.

He looked in grave danger of losing the match at that point, but Lendl's double fault drew Connors even at 5-5, and he broke Lendl's serve to win the set. That's when he raised his right index finger — signalling one more set.

down pass from back-up quarterback Alan Hood with 58 seconds left.

Archer knew he was in for a long day early in the game. "They were getting to us early, so in the second quarter we started to call roll out passes where I wouldn't set up in a pocket to try and slow their rush down so I'd have more time," Archer said.

"It slowed down their rush but we were still having execution problems. We're running a totally new scheme on offense now and guys who have played three or four years under the old system are having to change everything they have learned. Iowa picked up on our mistakes. They have some real intelligent players back there. (Larry) Station's only a sophomore but he plays like a senior."

Station, the preseason All-American linebacker candidate, was glad simply with the way things turned out Saturday.

"You hear all the preseason ratings saying about what you can do, but you have to prove it," he said. "It was nice to go out and prove it today."

wouldn't be ahead of Phillips," said Fry.

Against Iowa State, Gill gave one Iowa State defender a memorable straight arm that Fry likened to something Jim Brown, the ex-Cleveland great, used on opposing head-hunters.

But even more memorable was Gill's first touchdown run of the game, for 31 yards, in which he eluded strong safety Billy McCue with a piece of slickery made for highlight films.

As Gill described it: "I saw him running over from this way" — Gill pointed right — "so all I did was I cut back across the grain and he couldn't change direction because the field was still wet and he couldn't get his footing and do it. Cutting back like that has always worked pretty well for me."

It was an unconscious move, Gill said, made at that instant. He smiled that luminous, toothy smile of his and said, "I saw the goal 10 or 20 yards away, and I did what I had to do to get there."

A picture-perfect day for Hawks

Defensive end Dave Strobel prepares to envelop Iowa State quarterback David Archer.

Reserve running back Treye Jackson scores his first collegiate touchdown for Iowa with 1 minute and 58 seconds left in game.

Referee Glenn Fortin rolls an orange off the field in the first half of the game. Iowa was already leading, and the fruit may have been tossed by disgruntled Cyclone fans giving up on the Orange Bowl for their team in 1983.

Iowa State students who manned the cannon fired left before the Cyclones' fourth quarter touchdown.
