It's roses in January for Fry's Hawkeyes

By Jeff Stratton
Assistant Sports Editor

The final chapter remains to be written on the 1985 Iowa football team's storybook year, but whatever the outcome of the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl game, this season will long be remembered. The Hawkeyes' 31-9 victory over Minnesota Saturday at Kinnick Stadium capped a 10-1 season, gave Iowa the Big Ten Conference title outright and sends the squad to Pasadena, Calif., to play UCLA in the Rose Bowl.

Moments after the final gun sounded Saturday Hawkeye fans swarmed the field to celebrate Iowa's second trip to the Rose Bowl game in five years. Meanwhile, Coach Hayden Fry was receiving congratulations from UI President James O. Freedman.

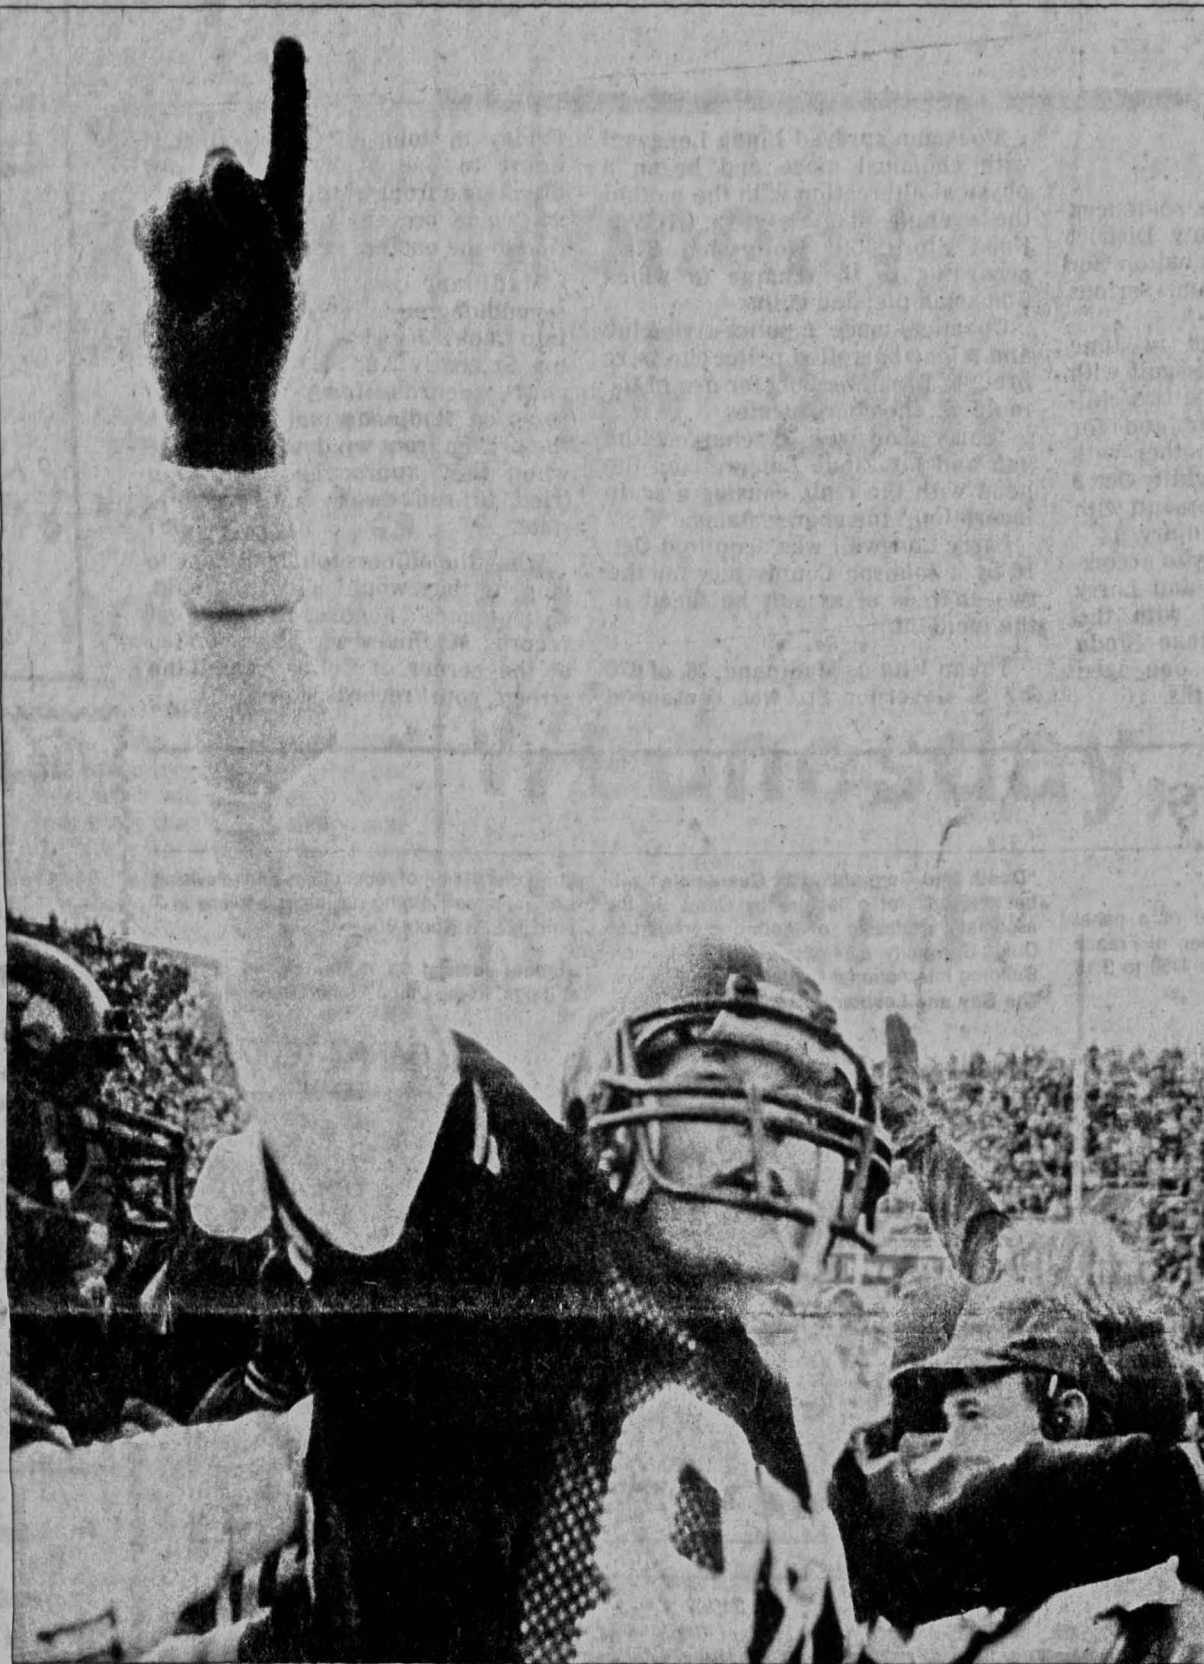

"COACH, I JUST want to tell you how proud the university is of everything that you and all the players have done this year," Freedman said. "You've been a great honor and credit to the university, and we are all going to be in Pasadena rooting for you."

The Iowa coach thanked Freedman for the Hawkeyes' indoor practice facility. "May I publicly thank you for the indoor facility. (Without it) we couldn't have gone," Fry said.

Fry also received a congratulatory bouquet of roses from Vice President of the Tournament of Roses Fred Soldwedel. "Coach Fry, I remember you out there (in Pasadena) in '82 and as you left you said you were going to return and darn if you're not going to return."

A JUBILANT FRY said Iowa's victory over Minnesota was his biggest win. "As of this point — and we still have one game remaining — this has got to be No. 1," he said. "It's the greatest ever."

"This is a great day for the state of Iowa and all the people. I've received thousands of letters this year from people complimenting the Hawks, not only because we're winning, but because of the way we are winning. I'm extremely proud the state of Iowa is happy."

Iowa quarterback Chuck Long, who was a member of the team that was defeated by Washington 28-0 in the 1982 Rose Bowl, promised a better performance by the Hawkeyes this time.

"It's great to be going back to Pasadena," Long said. "I was only a freshman when we went last time. It's going to be better this time."

LONG, WHOSE decision to shun a rich NFL contract and return to Iowa for a fifth season may have been the key to Iowa's success, expressed relief that the season was over.

"Last week was a long week," he said. "Usually the weeks fly by, but this week the pressure just kept building and building.

It has been a long year, but a fun year. I'm relieved it's over."

Long said the recognition the football team brought to the state contributed to his sense of accomplishment. "It was fun being No. 1 in the nation," he said. "Before I got here, I never knew where the University of Iowa was. I had never heard about it."

Fry said Long has been the key to the revival of Iowa's football fortunes. "The way Chuck has handled himself from a personal standpoint, whether being in a classroom, downtown or behind the center waiting for the snap has always been first class," he said.

"AS WE TRIED to become top citizens, we became better and better at football. Obviously, it all starts with your quarterback," Fry noted.

With the Rose Bowl berth clinched, the stampede west for Iowa fans has begun and several local travel agencies reported a steady stream of business Sunday.

"We've had tons and tons of calls asking for information (on Rose Bowl package trips)," Lois Doty, travel consultant for Meacham Travel Service, said. "Bookings have been good."

Doty said, however, it may be difficult to match the response Iowa fans exhibited in 1981, a year when the Hawkeyes ended years of frustration and traveled to the Rose Bowl for the first time since 1958.

"They were banging our doors down" in 1981, Doty said.

Fifty die as commandos seize plane

VALLETTA, Malta (UPI) — Egyptian commandos stormed a hijacked EgyptAir jetliner in a burst of gunfire Sunday and battled grenade-throwing Arab terrorists in a 10-minute firefight that left up to 50 people dead, Maltese officials said.

The Boeing 737 erupted into flames after the grenades were detonated, filling the cabin with smoke that billowed from the aircraft in one of the bloodiest conclusions to a hijacking in history.

The dead included at least one of the three Americans aboard — a 20-year-old woman who the pilot said was "executed" Saturday. Her name was not immediately released.

AT 8:15 P.M. (1:15 p.m. Iowa time), the commandos crept up to the airliner after the lights were extinguished at the Luqa airport on the southern end of Malta, said government information director Paul Mifsud. They blew in the cargo door and stormed into the plane firing automatic weapons, he said.

Realizing an assault was under way, the terrorists, who hijacked the plane 24 hours earlier en route from Athens to Cairo, pulled the pins on grenades and hurled them at their captives, Mifsud said.

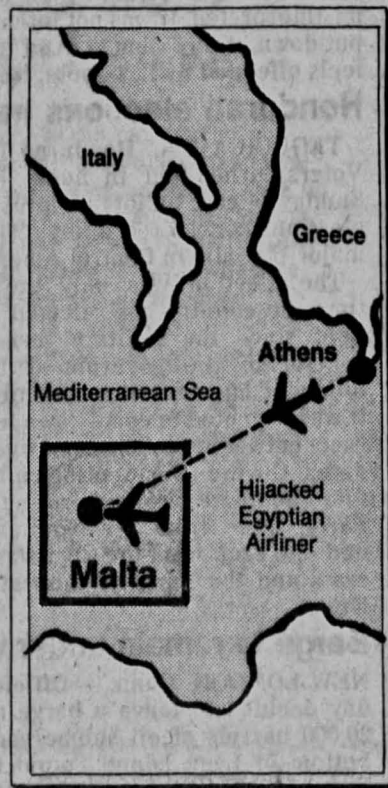

"The hijackers threw three hand grenades at the passengers and the grenades started a fire that filled the plane with flames and smoke. They (the commandos) fired with automatic weapons as they went in," he said.

ONE OF THE hijackers tried to kill the pilot, Captain Hani Galal, during the assault and fired a shot that grazed his head, but Galal picked up an ax and struck the hijacker with it.

The commandos and terrorists battled for 10 minutes before the gunfire stopped, Mifsud said.

Mifsud told a news conference "about 50" people were killed in the assault. All of the hijackers, believed to number four or five, were believed to have died, he said.

Mifsud and the State Department said no Americans were believed to have been aboard the plane during the commando assault. It was not immediately clear how many passengers had died at the hands of the hijackers before the raid. Reports ranged from one dead to as many as eight.

THE PILOT said a 20-year-old American woman was "executed" by the hijackers Saturday night and said the hijackers shot five other people during two gun battles with Egyptian sky marshals aboard the plane — one shortly after the hijacking began and another while the surrounded plane was in Malta.

"I can't describe to you how I felt seeing my passengers being killed in cold blood," Galal said.

"If I had to describe the hijackers I would say first-class killers. They were desperate. They would not hesitate to explode the whole plane. I did not think I would survive. I hated every minute of it."

Shortly after the plane landed on Malta at 10:20 p.m. Saturday, another American, a 30-year-old woman, was dumped from the plane onto the tarmac by the hijackers and left for dead. She was taken to a hospital, where she was in critical condition but conscious.

President Ronald Reagan was kept informed of the hijack but the raid was entirely "an Egyptian action," said a White House spokesman. He said the United States had offered to assist but was not asked.

Facts needed as AIDS cases rise

By Earl Johnston III

Coinciding with nationwide trends, the number of AIDS cases reported in Iowa has doubled in the past ten months, UI Hygienic Laboratory Director William Hausler said during a public awareness workshop on the disease Saturday.

Charting the number of AIDS cases in Iowa, Hausler said the 19 cases reported in Iowa over the past four years clearly demonstrates "this duplicating factor."

While emphasizing the number of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome cases is increasing, Hausler and UI nurse epidemiologist Dorothy Rasley also tried to dispel some of the mysteries surrounding the fatal disease during the workshop in the Bowen Science Building.

WHILE THE AIDS virus has been found in the tears and saliva of some patients, the disease is primarily transmitted by having sex with an infected individual, Hausler said.

He also said the disease has about an 85 percent mortality rate and 90 percent of its victims have been between the ages of 20 and 49.

Citing Department of Health and Human Services recommendations, Hausler put forth several strategies to avoid possibly contracting the disease:

- Avoid sexual contact

Classes study 'ordinary stuff'

By Kent Schuelke

Fast food, rock 'n' roll and sex roles — the sensations of the 1980s — spice up the curriculum of the UI American Studies program.

"You name it, if it takes place in America or if anyone ever thought of it taking place in America, we study it," UI American Studies Professor Wayne Franklin said.

"Our basic idea is to introduce students to the idea of studying culture, that it's important in their own lives and the life of the country," Franklin said. "There is a hell of a lot to study in the United States that no one ever studies, like the ordinary, everyday stuff."

THIS SEMESTER the department is offering 14 courses that deal with aspects of everyday life often ignored by traditional academia, he said.

UI American Studies Professor

"American studies is promoted by America's power in the world," says professor Wayne Franklin.

Richard Horwitz said a goal of the program is "to build a rebellious citizenry, to sow seeds of discontent so people will change the way America is for the better."

This semester there are 425 UI students enrolled in courses on American life, courses that deal with such things as the effects of children's books, architecture, and sex and family roles that are alternatives to marriage.

Horwitz said that the program keeps the classes small to promote discussion, and the faculty uses a wide variety of teaching methods.

"WE USE films, novels, poems, drama, furniture, architecture, people's back yards — it allows them to use their education to understand and criticize the normal ways of life," Horwitz said.

Franklin said he cannot understand why more students haven't put emphasis on studying contemporary America.

"It's like learning a foreign language and never learning English," he said.

UI English Department Chair John Raeburn, who teaches a class examining how American culture is reflected through photography, said it is important that people study the lives of ordinary Americans as well as the lives of the rich and famous.

"MOST OF US are not famous people, most of us are ordinary Americans, but we do things that are worthwhile," Raeburn said. "It's important that we examine the lives of people who do not necessarily leave monuments to themselves."

Raeburn cited a class Horwitz teaches on the Coralville strip as a prime example of how "everyday" America can be studied.

Raeburn said that students interview employees at businesses on the strip. "We're not interested in the entrepreneurs ... we're interested in the people who stand at the counter and serve customers."

Franklin said that Americans have been trying to create a unique culture ever since the colonists rebelled against King George, and that America's style is worth studying.

He also noted that the rest of the world is infatuated with America's culture.

"American studies is promoted by America's power in the world," Franklin said. "They're (other countries) fascinated with fast-food, the media, rock 'n' roll, the fate of rock 'n' roll, movies and the youth culture."

Roses, the perfect end to Long era

Long dream now reality in Rosy way

Last February Chuck Long decided to pass up pro football for a chance at the Rose Bowl. Saturday his dream came true.

"Back in February I made the decision to stay and come back and lead our team to the Rose Bowl. Everybody would like to do that, but now it has become a reality," Long said following Iowa's Big Ten title-clinching 31-9 victory over Minnesota.

"It's a dream come true. It really hasn't hit me yet but I know in the next couple of weeks it will. It's just been a great year and I'm proud to be on a 10-1 team."

Long was not happy with the Hawkeyes' 8-4-1 record last year and did not want to leave Iowa on such a disappointing note. It was especially hard after the Hawkeyes appeared to be headed for the Rose Bowl when they were 6-2 and leading the conference.

"LAST YEAR, I really didn't like the way we went out. We ended the regular season 6-4-1 and it just wasn't a good way to go out," Long said.

"We won in the Freedom Bowl but we wanted it a lot. I wanted it a lot more — it was a good year to come back."

Fry looking for redemption on Pasadena trip

By Jeff Stratton

Because of a 31-9 victory over Minnesota Saturday at Kinnick Stadium, Hayden Fry will take his Iowa football team back to the Rose Bowl with a chance of redemption for his Hawkeyes and the Big Ten Conference.

Iowa, which will meet UCLA in Pasadena Jan. 1 in the Rose Bowl, will try to make amends for a 28-0 thrashing at the hands of Washington in 1982.

The Hawkeyes will also try to bring home a victory for the Big Ten, which has been embarrassed at the Rose Bowl in recent seasons. The Big Ten has not won the contest since Michigan's 23-6 victory over Washington in 1981, and has won only two Rose Bowls since 1970.

"I GUARANTEE YOU we will do a better job this time," Fry said following Saturday's Big Ten title-clinching victory.

"We are extremely proud to represent the Big Ten and it will be a tough job, but we are a tough team," the Iowa coach said.

The key to Iowa's return trip to the Rose Bowl may have been determined in February when Chuck Long decided to return to Iowa for a fifth season.

"It all started last year when Chuck Long decided to pass up a few dollars from the NFL because he loves college football and he wanted to go to the Rose Bowl," Fry said. "I can't say how much I love Chuck Long as a person. He's done so much for our team."

"Words can't explain how I feel," Long said.

IOWA IMPROVED ITS record to 10-1, 7-1 in the conference, with the victory. The victory marked the first time an Iowa team has won 10 games in a season and was its first outright Big Ten Championship since 1958.

Minnesota dropped to 6-5 with the loss. The Golden Gophers, however, received a bid to play in the Independence Bowl against Clemson.

Long, in his final game before the Hawkeye fans in Kinnick Stadium, broke the Big Ten record for career passing yards. Long has 10,142 yards, breaking Mark Herrmann's mark of 9,946 set at Purdue from 1977-80.

"That's a great feeling," Long said. "I never dreamed five years ago I'd come close to Mark Herrmann's record. It is something

Hawks grab Windy City title

By Brad Zimaneck

If history follows suit, the Iowa men's gymnastics team will be the NCAA Champions when the 1985-86 season is finished in April.

The Hawkeyes came back from last week's poor performance in grand style at the Big Eight Invitational, capturing the Windy City Invitational Saturday in Chicago.

"I think in the history of the meet the team that has won has gone on to win the NCAA's four out of the last five years," Iowa Coach Tom Dunn said. "While everyone else is going to get better, so hopefully we can keep some of that distance."

Saturday Iowa definitely put some distance between itself and the rest of the 11-team field. The Hawkeyes scored 274.45 points, nearly eight points better than runner-up Oklahoma.

ROUNDING OUT the field were Southern Illinois (265.75), Iowa State (264.35), Nebraska (263.8), Ohio State (263.3), Minnesota (261.9), Illinois-Chicago (250.65), Indiana State (248.2) and Michigan (242.05).

Dunn wasn't surprised Iowa won the meet, but was surprised that nobody stayed closer to the Hawkeyes.

"I was very pleased. We did a much better job than we did last week. We hit about 75 percent of our routines, while we hit only about 50 percent last week, which is very good this early in the season," Dunn said.

"We really outdistanced the field and that was a little bit surprising. I thought we could win but I didn't think we would win so big," he added.

Leading the Hawkeyes were Dan Bachman, Ron Nasti and Joe Thome. Combined, they took three of the top four all-around positions in the meet.

22 points, but according to Iowa Coach Pete Kennedy the Hawkeyes were "inches away in a few races" from sending the meet to the final event, the 800-yard freestyle relay, to determine the meet's outcome.

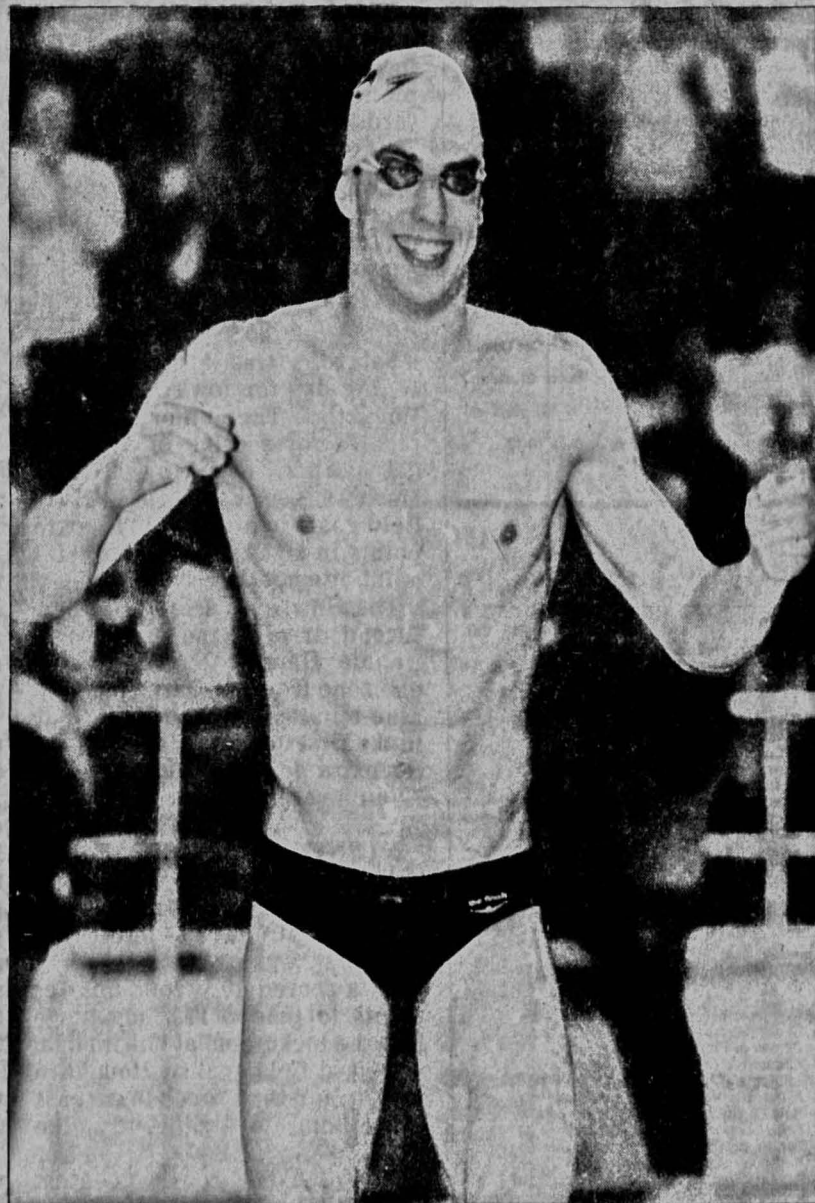

"It was a matter of a few tenths here and there and the meet would've gone to the final relay," Kennedy said.

"Michigan State had a great recruiting year and it showed," the Iowa coach said. "The meet showed some of our weaknesses that we need to be aware of and it showed us some of our strengths."

THOSE STRENGTHS were the performances of Jane Keating, Allison Lloyd and Kim Stevens.

season record to 5-0, overwhelming Bradley, 80-33, Saturday and Northwestern, 59-27, Sunday.

Williams, a double winner in the 50- and 100-yard freestyles, broke his own Big Ten record of 19.87 seconds in the 50 with a 19.86 mark, qualifying him for NAAs in early April. His time of 44.66 in the 100 freestyle was also a new meet record.

"I felt good coming in today," Williams said. "I didn't think about breaking any records, but it was a good night to do it. I know in the future I'll be able to swim faster than that."
