Andretti: Speed | Padres rally from 14-0, but Cards hold on, 17-10

SAN DIEGO, CALIF. (AP) - Thelast thing St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog wanted to do was dip into his bullpen with a 14-0 lead going into the seventh inning.

But trailing, 14-0, San Diego scored five runs in the seventh to chase starter Bob Forsch and five more in the ninth off Ray Soff before the Cardinals nailed down a 17-10 victory Thursday.

"Have you ever seen anything like that? I never have," Herzog said. "I wonder what was the biggest blown lead in the final inning in history? This one had all the makings."

The Padres came into the ninth trailing, 17-5, en route to season highs of 10 runs and 17 hits. They sent six batters to the plate and scored five homers, including a two-run shot by rookie Stanley Jefferson and a threerun homer by Bruce Bochy in the seventh, when the Padres chased Forsch.

"I don't know what happened," said Forsch (3-1). "If I knew, I would have corrected it. You've got to throw strikes in situations like that. I don't know, maybe I lost concentration."

For the Cardinals, rookie Skeeter Barnes hit a three-run homer in his first at-bat of the season and Jack

"I'm a good judge of people. That guy came in the door wrong," said the elder Station, who acknowledged his son was one of four members of the Hawkeyes' 1985 Big Ten championship team offered money by Walter while they were still playing for

Wide receiver Robert Smith said Thursday that the agents also tried to make him an offer during his junior year.

"He talked so fast and so smooth," the senior Station said of Walters, " knew we didn't want to have anything to do with him."

Walters did not return phone calls Thursday.

Segregation

Station's views coincide with an assessment of Walters and his partner, Lloyd Bloom, made public Wednesday by a University of Iowa investigating committee. That committee found proof that two athletes accepted money in 1985 from Walters. The committee said the athletes violated CAA rules, but blasted Walters' and oom's business practices.

But the committee also criticized 2110 the way the university handles its athletic business, particularly its segregating of athletes in university dormitories and its handling of minority athletes. "Some student-athletes feel alienated from the community and that alienation may lead to a serious lack of loyalty to the institution, the state and their teammates," the report said. "If we were at fault at all, we have somewhere failed to bring the athletes into our community as fully as we might have," said David Vernon, a U of I law professor and chairman of the three-member committee. athletic ability," the report said.

The committee suggested that the athletic department, with its establishment of separate living facilities for its athletes within the Iowa dormitories, must accept part of the blame. It suggested that the housing of athletes together in various dormitories should be reviewed because it has become a problem.

"While it may be thought to help the football program to place the student-athletes in a separate dormitory," the report said, "the committee is convinced that the existence of such facilities contributes to the development of an alienation that erodes necessary institutional loyalties.

Wednesday, Athletic Director Bump Elliott indicated he supported the committee's recommendations, but he did not comment directly on whether athletic dormitories would

EL PASO, TEXAS (AP) - Police investigating the sudden death of Texas-El Paso basketball player Hernell "Jeep" Jackson were awaiting lab tests Thursday that may confirm if cocaine was a key factor.

Jackson, 23, died last Saturday during a benefit basketball game, and police said the drug appeared to be a contributing cause.

"An autopsy has ruled out natural causes and physical trauma," the police affidavit said. "Pending receipt of final toxicology reports, it is believed that cocaine was the contributing factor to the death."

A 19-year-old woman was arrested Wednesday on drug charges after a witness signed a statement saying the woman gave Jackson cocaine the night before he died.

"We don't anticipate any more |arrests | right now," said El Paso police Capt. Luis Barba, who is in charge of the investigation. "We'll wait for the toxicology report."

Jackson was playing in a basketball game with some Houston Oilers football players at the Fort Bliss military reservation. He collapsed while sitting on the bench and was pronounced dead an hour later.

Jackson passed three drug tests during the basketball season, said UTEP interim athletic director Richard Burns. 'The first, Burns said, was a routine test Oct. 14 for all UTEP athletes, and the next two were done in March as part of the NCAA's new drug-testing program for its postseason basketball tournament. NASCAR slows down its stock cars

By The Associated Press

A high-speed crash that almost sent Bobby Allison's race car hurtling into a packed grandstand has brought about a rules change designed to slow down NASCAR's stock cars.

Just three days after the near tragedy at Alabama International Motor Speedway in which Allison escaped injury and several spectators were slightly injured, NASCAR has ordered race teams to change to a smaller carburetor.

The notice, which was mailed to Winston Cup competitors on Wednesday, mandates the use of the smaller carburetor for the races July 4 at Daytona International Speedway and July 26 at the Alabama track, the two places where laps faster than 200 mph have become commonplace.

Allison had been turning laps at speeds faster than 205 mph shortly before he apparently ran over some debris, cut a tire and flew off the track, tearing down 150 feet of fencing just 10 feet in front of the first row of spectators. "Better Racing"

Les Richter, vice president of competition for NASCAR, told The Associated Press at his Daytona Beach, Fla., office Thursday: "This is something that we've been looking at for some time. Bobby Allison's accident probably brought a consciousness that we would like to see the cars go slower.

"But we have been talking about these things for a long time, obtaining information on what would happen if we did this, or what would happen if we did that. We think if we reduce speeds we'll have better racing."

Richter, who estimated the carburetor change will reduce speeds from 8 to 10 mph, said there were several alternatives to reducing carburetor size, including requiring lower gearing, using carburetor restrictor plates, working with the spoilers and wings to change aerodynamics, and downsizing the engines.

Racers Approve

"The selection we have made is the best of what we had to choose from," Richter said. "We're not looking at it as a quick fix, we're looking at it as an alternative to what we set out to do earlier in the year; that's prepare ourselves down the road to when we'll introduce the V6 engine."

He also raised the possibility that the smaller carburetor, which restricts the flow of gasoline to the engine, thereby reducing horsepower, could wind up being used for all races next season. "We're going to look at those two races [the Firecracker 400 and the Talladega 500 to see if we get what we want to occur," Richter said. "Then we might employ the carburetor rule for 1988. From an economic standpoint, it's probably the b all the alternatives."

Reached at Charlotte Motor S way in Harrisburg, N.C., Darrell trip, a three-time Winston Cup o pion, said: "They should do what it takes to make the cars safe. carburetor restriction is a good porary fix at those speeds."

Phil Barkdoll, a driver who flight during a spectacular acc earlier this season at Daytona, s Harrisburg: "Reducing the top speeds is a super idea. If they do something with the aerodynam the cars are gonna fly. The car tor change is the start of a good i

Possible Record

Looking at the likelihood of a record this weekend, three-time winner honest, after all of the testing sessions, the way it was starting to stack up, I was beginning to doubt you'd see the record broken.

"But, suddenly, Mario runs 218 virtually right out of the truck. So, yes, now I believe we're going to see a record. How fast depends on the conditions, the weather, when which cars go out.

"There are other cars that could move up. Rahal's running quick, Crawford's going quick with an older car. I look for a record front row."

Defending champion Bobby Rahal and Jim Crawford of Scotland both have been faster than 215 in practice, while a number of drivers have surpassed 210.

Andretti said: "I would say the pole is going to be between 218 and 220. I'd say around 220, depending on th weather. But, what you're going to see versus last year is a lot of cars running 215 and 216, where last year it was 212 and 213."

"If you look at the people they proached here and the others, th so," said Mims, who also is Iov athletic academic adviser. " seem to think that all young bl males are going to be willing to t money from them."

Mims said he understands why a black college athlete would be terr ed to take money from Walters other agents. "Black males do have doctors, lawyers, or preside of corporations as their role model he said. "They have athletes and tertainers."

As a result, Mims said, black a letes may be more willing to t money even though it is in violation college rules. "If a person offers a chance at the big time like y idols," he said, "you might be inclin to take it even though it could beco. a great mistake."

Didn't Listen

Smith, a senior from Dallas, v graduate with his class this year a enter graduate school at lowa no semester. He said he reject Walters' overture because he knew was a violation of the rules. "I t him immediately that I couldn't ha anything to do with him because Coach Fry's rules," he said.

Smith said no money was offer because he didn't want to listen to a offer.

Smith agreed with Mims agents such as Walters are appeal to weaknesses of young black a letes.

"They just think we are all hung. for money and will take it," Smith Char VanderLinden, Pella, 13:37. said. "That is a decision for each athlete to make, but I know the Univer ty of Iowa has meant more to me the just playing football." As for Station, his father said t their meeting with Walters Bloom actually ended when the men left the family to discuss th offer. "It was funny because t thought by leaving we would pick the money for some reason," Stati said. "They were really wrong."

Navratilova, Graf advance

ROME, ITALY (AP) - Top-seeded Martina Navratilova of the United States and No. 2 Steffi Graf of West Germany cruised into the quarterfinals of the $150,000 Italian Open women's tennis tournament with straight-set victories Thursday.

Navratilova, ranked No. 1 in the world, overpowered Radka Zrubakova of Czechoslovakia, 6-2, 6-2, and Graf downed Annamaria Cecchini of, Italy 6-1, 7-5.

Navratilova, who has not won a tournament this year and struggled through two tie-breakers in her first match, showed off her range of shots in eliminating Zrubakova in 50 minutes.

She served and volleyed with authority and mixed in a number of deft drop shots and volleys to overwhelm the 16-year-old Czech.

Also advancing to the quarterfinals were third-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 4 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina and No. 5 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany.

Two unseeded players also reached the round of eight: 15-year-old Arantxa Sanchez of Spain and Bettina Fulco of Argentina.

The 17-year-old Graf, No. 2 in the world, appeared headed to an easy victory after breezing through the first set with the loss of only one game.

But the 21-year-old Cecchini, ranked 84th in the world, changed tactics in the second set and came close to winning it.

Cecchini led 5-4 and was up 30-0 on Graf's serve in the 10th game. But she made two unforced errors and Graf held for 5-5.
