HARRISBURG, N.C. — For three years, NASCAR has been trying to find a home for The Winston, a race featuring its brightest stars.

How about holding it next year at some rural dirt track? Way, way out in the country, where people still carry sidearms and make moonshine. On a Saturday night.

Dress the drivers in blue jeans, street shoes and some of those funnylooking old helmets.

That's where the NASCAR drivers took their sport Sunday afternoon at Charlotte Motor Speedway, right back to its dusty roots.

Dale Earnhardt and Bill Elliott might just as well have been a couple of ol' redneck boys, juiced up with a bellyful of bourbon, bumping each other up against the fence and raisin' heck.

COMMENTARY

start turning left or right into each other with malice aforethought at speeds of more than 150 miles an hour, it is deadly grim. There's enough risk in stock car racing without having someone trying to take you out with a 3,500-pound weapon moving at high speed.

We chuckle at some of the little incidents that crop up fairly regularly in auto racing. Rubbing fenders, as they call it, blocking somebody, bumping someone from the rear to tell him to get out of the way, that Earnhardt tells it one way, Elliott another. Other drivers have their own versions.

Early in the last segment of this three-chapter race with a $150,000 difference between first-place money and second, Elliott hit Geoff Bodine, spinning him between the first and second turns.

Elliott says Earnhardt hit his right rear panel, causing him to lose control and run into Bodine. Tim Richmond, following close behind, verified that version. Earnhardt contended he didn't touch either.

On the next lap, Elliott forced Earnhardt off the track into the infield grass on the front straight. Two laps later, Elliott had a tire go down, almost wrecking him. He said it was the result of Earnhardt's hitting him, forcing his fender in and cutting the tire.

you beside him, then tries to run you into the wall, is that racing?" asked Elliott.

But he slammed into Earnhardt on the backstretch after Earnhardt had won the first prize and was taking a victory lap.

"That bothered me," said Earnhardt. "We'll have to see what NASCAR has to say about that. It was a little bit unsportsmanlike, I thought."

Two drivers who had choice seats for much of this war were Bodine and Richmond.

Bodine, who has been a vocal critic of Earnhardt's style in the past, said, "You race hard and you do everything you can, you even rub and bang with people, but you don't try to kill them. "If he thinks that's racing, he's sick. I don't care if it was for $200,000 or $2 million, and I'd tell him this to his face, my life is worth more than $200,000."

Richmond said, "It was worth being in third [where he finished] just to watch the show. It was like bumper cars that last 10 laps.

"I watched that fiasco. I guess no matter how many boos there are [Earnhardt heard plenty before and after the race], you've gotta keep doing your deal. I think if I got all those boos, I'd have to rethink."

The Earnhardt and Elliott crews almost got into a brawl at the end. Earnhardt said if Elliott wants to carry on their war he will and offered to "stand flat-footed with him." And Elliott said he's fed up with Earnhardt's bullying tactics and added, "We'll see what happens next week [they meet again in the Winn-Dixie 300 here Saturday]."

It is the civic duty of all news outlets to provide not only the entertaining information the people desire, but also the dull and boring information they need to function as enlightened, productive citizens.

That isn't to say all Iowans don't care about hockey. Directly above Iowa on most maps of the United States sits Minnesota, whose state mineral is the ice cube.

People who live in Minnesota would rather watch or play hockey than almost anything else, especially between mosquito-hunting seasons. Many Iowans, many more than care to admit, have relatives in Minnesota. Thousands came from "up there" themselves.

All of which means interest in hockey is much more intense than we in the news business believe it to be. In Waterloo, Dubuque and Des Moines people flock to see the local United States Hockey League teams perform.

Flock might be overstating matters, but crowds do turn out to watch the games and drink beer, not necessarily in that order of importance. On the rare occasion when a fight does erupt, ushers quickly intervene before the athletes even notice it.

BE THAT as it may, a sports fan should not be forced to live on a diet of spring football games alone, even in this state. So here is everything you need to know about the Stanley Cup final: Wayne Gretzky.

He is 26 years old. He holds or shares 41 NHL records, including the career mark for playoff points. He is a great center who doesn't stand 7 feet tall. Though he is built more along the lines of Barry Manilow, he is Muhammad Ali, Bjorn Borg, Jack Nicklaus, Willie Mays, Larry Bird and Walter Payton rolled into one. He might be the greatest athlete who ever lived. What's more, you young hockey fans out there, he's a pacifist when it comes to fighting. He's a wimp and proud of it. In Edmonton versus Philadelphia, it is the brilliant offensive team against the brilliant defensive team. As attractive as this series is, the NHL was more interesting when there were only six teams and nobody wore helmets or face masks or more than three real teeth, and it was still possible to remember who played for whom. Now there is an NHL team for every 534 North Americans, and everyone wears a helmet or a face mask or at least three real teeth. Which gives the television viewer the impression that all the players were taken from the same table-top hockey game. Everyone except Gretzky, that is. To most of us, he is the league's reason for being.

But this was grim business they of were about Sunday. When drivers of

After slicing his wrist in an accident last week, Kevin DeNike of Bettendorf didn't know if he'd be able to last 36 holes at The Wakonda Club in Des Moines in Monday's first qualifying round for the U.S. Open golf tournament.

But the assistant pro at Crow Valley Country Club decided to give it a try, and his 36-hole score of 137 was easily the best of the 43-man field. DeNike, who needed stitches to close the wound to his wrist after a knife slipped while he was taking a grip off a golf club Wednesday, was one of four golfers advancing to sectional qualifying next month. ## FBI probes agents' ties to Huskers

Records of some football players are subpoenaed

By TOM WITOSKY Register Staff Writer

The federal investigation into the activities of New York sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom apparently now includes their dealings with current or former members of the University of Nebraska Cornhusker football team.

Joe Rowson, director of university public affairs, said Monday that school officials are in the process of complying with a subpoena from federal officials for certain records dealing with Nebraska students who were members of the football team.

But Rowson declined to name what records have been requested or identify which players may be involved. He said no identification of records or players could be made because of federal privacy statutes banning identification of college students by school officials. In addition, Rowson could not say whether FBI agents had interviewed any school or team officials. He said he didn't know when the subpoena was received. "The only thing I can say is that we have received a subpoena and we are now trying to comply with it through our lawyers," Rowson said. "That's really all I know about it." Athletic Director Bob Devaney and head football coach Tom Osborne could not be reached for comment.

NOW, ABOUT those pregame brawls I suckered you into this column with. The following occurred during the Montreal-Philadelphia series.

Claude Lemieux of the Canadiens has this ritual in which he flips a puck into the opponent's empty net before skating off to the locker room at the end of warmups. In the previous few games the Flyers had turned the net backward, which forced Lemieux to skate to other end of the rink and deposit the puck. The last time they played, he took a second shot, banking the puck off the boards and into the net like Willie Mosconi. The Flyers lost that game, 5-2. So, Thursday night they devised a new strategy. They left the net alone, waited in the weeds for Lemieux and ambushed him. One player threw a stick at Lemieux's shot. Another threw a fist at Lemieux's face. That was a mere brush fire next to the 15-minute conflagration that followed. Players came zipping out of the locker rooms in their underwear to join the party. One guy schlepped onto the ice in his shower slippers. As the free-for-all raged the three officials were still suiting up. They arrived 10 minutes into the fray. A good six fights started before the game finally broke out. The Flyers' Ed Hospodar, who was suspended for the remainder of the playoffs, had a good explanation for the rumble. "They started it," he said. Our sincere apologies for the shoddy coverage.

DeNike had rounds of 71 and 66, Elliott was 70-73, Schall shot 73-71 and Miller 71-74.

Miller beat amateur Chris Vandell of Des Moines in a playoff to determine the fourth qualifier.

Miller hit a 5-iron second shot to within nine feet of the cup on the 440yard par-4 first hole. Vandell, who had rounds of 72 and 73, was short of the green on his approach, got a wedge shot to within three feet, but missed the putt after Miller had left his birdie attempt short. Vandell will be the alternate.

The second round Monday was delayed for 45 minutes when a thunderstorm rumbled through Des Moines, but it did nothing to deter DeNike's torrid pace. He had seven birdies in the afternoon to go with one bogey. He made one 20-foot birdie putt, but the rest were considerably shorter.

DeNike, who had failed to get past local qualifying in three previous attempts, could have had an even better score. He missed four putts of 10 feet or less.

"It was one of the best rounds I've ever seen from tee to green," said Schall, DeNike's playing partner.

DeNike had doubts about his ability to compete because of the injury to OMAHA, NEB. — Darrin Jackson and Luis Quinones hit home runs Monday night to help the Iowa Cubs to a 5-3 American Association victory over Omaha.

Jackson's homer pulled the Cubs into a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning, and Quinones belted a three-run homer in the sixth after Omaha had moved back in front with two runs in the bottom of the fifth.

Grand Jury Probe

The disclosure by Nebraska officials comes on the eve of the opening of a federal grand jury investigation in Chicago, which is believed to be centering on the dealings between the two entertainment agents and a number of top collegiate football players during the past two years.

Last week the FBI presented subpoenas to University of Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds that request all of the university's financial and amateur-status records on former running back Edwin Simmons and former teammates Everett Gay and William Harris, according to the Austin American-Statesman.

The grand jury, which has subpoenaed records from the University of Iowa concerning Walters' apparent payments to two former Hawkeye players, also reportedly is investigating the circumstances of a March 16 assault on Kathe Clements, an assistant to sports agent Steve Zucker of Skokie, Ill.

East wins final event to tie Valley in girls' track meet

By KEN PRIDEAUX Register Staff Writer

East captured the final event, the 4 x 400 relay, to tie Valley for the Mc-Donald's Invitational Class 2-A girls' track title at Urbandale Monday night

Valley ran second in the 4 x 400 and matched East with 92 points to earn its first meet crown of the season. Marshalltown was third with 84 points.

Valley sophomore Christa Holms set two meet records. She broke her own mark in the 3,000 meters with a time of 10 minutes 12.65 seconds, knocking 12 seconds off her 1986 record.

Holms also set a mark in the 1,500, posting a 4:45.75. She chopped 5 seconds off the standard set by Marcy Crose of Hoover in 1980.

The Edmonds cousins from East earned the other two new meet records. Lisa Edmonds, a double winner in the 200 and 400, ran a meet-best :57.45 in the 400. Johnelle Edmonds, a junior, shattered the 800 record with a 2:22.42.

Mystery lingers about Lindgren

EUGENE, ORE, (AP) - Tracy Walters waited nearly a decade for a chance to renew ties with his star pupil, but most of the questions raised by seven years of silence lingered after Gerry Lindgren's return to competition.

Lindgren, 41, a former star distance runner, finished 11th Saturday in the Legends Mile at the University of Oregon Twilight Meet. He was timed in 4 minutes 39.06 seconds.

The meet marked his return to the public eye for the first time since he left his wife, three children and a failing business in 1980.

Lindgren also left behind a paternity lawsuit he said was unfounded, moving to Hawaii and using the name Gale Young.

Walters, Lindgren's high school coach, said he waited nine years for the chance to sneak up behind Lindgren and give him "a big hug."

Lindgren was also reunited with his mother, Eleanor, and one of two brothers, Mickey.

"Everybody said I'd disappeared and run away," Lindgren said. "I didn't even know about it. I was surprised as heck to find out I disapneared Nabody over told me neonle of a knee injury. He was not drafted by any National Football League team.

Rowson said there was a possibility that names could be released later, but added he was unsure that would occur.

Walters and Bloom apparently are among the targets in what amounts to a nationwide probe of allegations concerning extortion, racketeerin and fraud among sports agents. FBI agents in Dallas, Atlanta and New York reportedly have been conducting inquiries into claims from several players that Walters threatened them for firing him. Such threats could constitute extortion, a violation of federal law.

The two agents have denied all allegations, but have acknowledged they paid several players, including former Hawkeye running back Ror Harmon and defensive back Devon Mitchell, as inducements to sign with him during their collegiate careers. Such activity is a violation of NCAA rules.
