IOWA CITY, IA. — While I doubt either of the men concerned will be thrilled at the analogy, the Larry Wieczorek-Chris Gambol combination in Iowa's track and field operation brings to mind that thrilling time during jungle movies when a mahout puts an elephant through its paces.

Gambol is a 6-foot 7-inch, 285pound Hawkeye senior who comes into the Big Ten meet here Saturday and Sunday as one of the favorites in the shot and discus events. His 59-3 | relationship between two former with the 16-pound shot at the Drake Relays was a school record.

Wieczorek is his coach, proving once again that the "don't do as I do, do as I say" theory can work nicely.

1967. Good enough to set a school record for 5,000 meters that still stands. He was 5-8 and 135 pounds as a senior. Since then, WIECZOREK he has grown no taller but added 10 pounds, only a tiny bit of which can be accounted for by his moustache. the smallest weight coach in Division I track," admits Wieczorek, who left a successful high school program at Proviso West in Hillside, Ill., three years ago to handle the field events for Ted Wheeler, Iowa's head coach. "Chris can throw me farther than I can throw the shot. Actually, since drug testing, I've given up the weight events," quips Wieczorek. "I would never think of throwing either shot or discus in public. When I feel the need to experiment with something I've read about, I sneak out after dark.

"However, I do a lot of imitations of field event performers. I walk down the street doing the discus spin. I triple jump over the dog in the living room. The guys on our squad seem to get a kick out of those."

WIECZOREK HAS TO do a lot of looking up while talking to Gambol, just as Tom Davis must while communicating with most of his basketball pupils when he and they are standing. Just as Dr. Tom learned how centers should play by study and observation, Larry has soaked in a lot of knowledge on the events he wasn't physically suited to perform.

"You study all the events while preparing to coach, but I never worked with the weight events on a daily basis until I came to Iowa," says Wieczorek. "But when an assistant's job opened here, it was for the hurdles and field events. Since then, Ronni McCoy became a graduate assistant and took over the hurdles, so I'm primarily with field events now."

Things have gone well. The previous two years, Gary Kostrubala was his star pupil. Small for the events at 6-2 and 215, Kostrubala used explosive speed in 1986 to (1) set a school record of 58-81/4 in the shot; (2) whip the discus 202-4 for a victory at the Texas Relays, becoming the first Big Ten performer ever to drop one out 200 or more.

Less than a year later, only one of Kostrubala's records still stands.

THE 1986-87 SCHOOL year turned out nicely for Gambol, also an offensive tackle from Oxford, Mich. Not only did he move up to a starting position in football but, when taken early in the third round by Indianapolis, leaped past several more publicized teammates to become the first Hawkeye drafted by an NFL team.

"He's really a developing athlete, just learning to handle that big body he owns," says Wieczorek. "Chris only threw 60 in high school with the 12-pound shot. When he tried the discus then, he couldn't handle the spin and simply threw while standing."

This year, no longer in spring football and able to work full time on his events for the first time, Gambol has improved over a foot in the shot and added 13 feet in the discus. A week after throwing poorly at Drake, he reached a personal best of 175-7.

"He's doing so well now with the spin in the discus that I wish we had time to experiment with him spinning MORNING REPORT in the shot, too," says the coach. Gambol spent last week at the Colts' mini-camp. He took along a 16-pound metal ball but didn't get the usual amount of practice time at muscling it out for distance.

"His level of consistency is way up, but we're still looking for him to pop that big one out past 60. He'll have had four days of preparation after the mini-camp. Wouldn't it be great if the big one came on Sunday?" Wouldn't it, though? And if it happens, I would hope Wieczorek would leap atop Gambol's shoulders for one triumphant turn around what after 12:30 p.m. Sunday will be the Francis X. Cretzmeyer track, renamed in honor of the talented and popular former Iowa track star and coach.

Fry: Agents probe needed to end problem

By TOM WITOSKY

Register Staff Writer

A federal investigation into sports agents and college athletes may be embarrassing, but it's also necessary to clean up what has become a major problem, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said Tuesday.

"I truly believe that intercollegiate athletics will be healthier when this is finally over," Fry said. "Obviously, some schools are going to have to bite the bullet with what has been disclosed, but it is also clear some of us, despite our strong efforts, don't have this problem under control."

Fry's comments are the first he has made since it was disclosed last week that FBI agents had interviewed him and other school officials about the Iowa football players and agent Norby Walters.

School officials said records developed during a recent investigation into Walters' activities have been subpoenaed.

Fry declined to comment directly on the investigation, saying that he doesn't want to face the possibility of being drawn into it. "If I would make some sort of statement, I could be drawn into it by subpoena or something, and I don't want to have any part of that," Fry said.

Grand Jury Probe

A federal grand jury has reportedly been convened in Chicago to investigate possible fraud, extortion and racketeering among sports agents, as well as the possibility that some college athletes may have participated in such criminal violations.

Two targets in the probe appear to be Walters and his partner, Lloyd Bloom.

Those two have acknowledged they paid money to some athletes as inducements to get them to appoint Walters and Bloom as their agents with professional athletic teams.

Walters has said that he paid former Iowa players Ronnie Harmon and Devon Mitchell to become his clients while they still had college eligibility, a violation of NCAA rules.

Harmon has been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury, and Mitchell, according to a report in the Atlanta Constitution, also has received one. Harmon, who is now a running back for the Buffalo Bills, has acknowledged receipt of the subpoena, but Mitchell, a member of the Detroit Lions, has declined to comment on the situation.

A spokesman for the Lions said Tuesday that the team doesn't know if Mitchell has been asked to testify before the grand jury. "We can't confirm or deny it," the spokesman said. "We really don't know if it is true or

The Atlanta newspaper said athletes from at least seven universities, including Iowa, have been subpoenaed, and that as many as 60 may be asked to testify. It said athletes from Alabama, Purdue, Southern Methodist, Texas, Texas Christian and Southern California have received subpoenas, and that players from Auburn and Clemson are expected to be subpoenaed.

Those who have received subpoenaes, according to the newspaper, include two Alabama basketball players, Derrick McKey and Terry Coner. The football players, in addition to Mitchell and Harmon, include Tony Woods of Pittsburgh; Rod Woodson of Purdue; Jeff Atkins, Jerry Ball, Terence Mann and Ron Morris of Southern Methodist; Everett Gay, William Harris and Edwin Simmons of Texas; Byron Linwood and Egypt Allen of Texas Christian; and Louis Brock Jr. of Southern California.

The Constitution also said the Internal Revenue Service has begun its own investigation.

Asked what impact the disclosures would have on college football, Fry said that he believes most schools would tighten the procedures for dealing with agents. He also said athletes would be more likely to resist offers from agents while they are still eligible to play in college.

NCAA Rules

Under NCAA rules, athletes are allowed to have contacts with prospective agents, but are forbidden from signing any agreements with them. If an athlete were to have signed an agreement or been paid, he would be declared ineligible. In addition, the NCAA could require a school that allowed an ineligible athlete to

Parish's 31 points leads I get a lot of kidding about being Boston to 104-91 romp

> BOSTON, MASS. (AP) - Robert Parish scored 15 of his 31 points in the third quarter when Boston took control of the game, and the Celtics went on to a 104-91 victory over Detroit in the opener of their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference final Tuesday night.

Adrian Dantley's ROBERT basket pulled the Pistons to within PARISH 48-47 early in the third period, but Parish scored 13 points in a 26-14 run that gave the Celtics a 74-61 advantage with 1 minutes 6 seconds left in the quarter.

Detroit cut the margin to 75-68 going into the fourth period, but Boston maintained a lead of from seven to 15 points the rest of the way.

Boston, which has won 33 of its last 34 games at Boston Garden, will be at home again for second game of the best-of-seven series Thursday night.

Kevin McHale scored 21 points and Dennis Johnson and Larry Bird had 18 apiece for the Celtics, who had just one day off after their seven-game conference semifinal victory over hadn't played since Wednesday.

Isiah Thomas scored 18 points and Dantley finished with 17 for the Pistons, who have lost lost 15th straight games at Boston Garden since their last victory there on Dec. 19, 1982.

Detroit took a 16-11 lead on a jump shot by Joe Dumars with 5:06 left in the first period, but Johnson hit two baskets that started a 14-2 spurt that put Boston in front for good.

Matt Bullard knows how hard it was for Coach Denny Crum and his selection committee to pick a basketball team for the Pan American

"Everyone who was there played well, no one was lagging behind," said Bullard, a former West Des Moines Valley star who plays at Colorado.

Bullard wasn't one of the 12 players selected to the team, which starts competition in the Pan Am Games in Indianapolis in August. Crum, the coach at Louisville, will be the head coach.

Iowa guard B.J. Armstrong and forward Roy Marble and Iowa State forward Jeff Grayer were also at the tryouts but weren't selected.

Players Work Hard

"I think one reason why no one dominated the trials was because the competition was tremendous," said Gary Close, an assistant coach at Iowa. "There was not a bad player out there. Everyone was working hard to get a spot on the team, and that created a very competitive situation."

Navy center David Robinson, college basketball's player of the year, was one of the dozen players selected, even though he didn't take part in the five-day tryouts at Colorado Springs, Colo. He was granted a waiver because of an academic conflict.

The team was selected by a panel of eight coaches, chaired by Indiana Coach Bob Knight.

Two members of Knight's NCAA championship team, 6-foot 1-inch guard Keith Smart and 6-10 center Dean Garrett, were selected, as was Kansas all-American Danny Manning. Rounding out the squad are Willie Anderson, 6-7, Georgia; Ricky Berry, 6-8, San Jose State; Fennis Dembo, 6-5, Wyoming; Pervis Ellison, 6-9, Louisville; Rex Chapman, 6-4, Kentucky; Jerome Lane, 6-6, Pittsburgh; Jeff Lebo, 6-3, North Carolina; and Jerome Richardson, 6-1,

Two Other Teams

Bullard, Marble, Armstrong and Grayer are still in the running for one of two U.S. squads that will compete this summer. Duke's Mike Krzyzewski will coach a team in the World University Games, which start in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, in July. Larry Brown of Kansas will coach a U.S. team in an international tournament in Italy in July.

CHICAGO, ILL. (AP) — The Chicago Cubs have been winning all year with the long ball. Tuesday, they took a shorter route.

pitcher in the National League to win seven games, two more than he had all last season. But Sutcliffe (7-2) wasn't happy when he left the game in the seventh after giving up a double and two walks to load the bases.

"I wouldn't have minded if they got three hits and I left the game," he said, "but you hate to walk two guys when you have a 9-1 lead."

Sutcliffe gave up five hits and two runs, walked five and struck out three. Reliever Ed Lynch retired the last nine in a row to pick up his third

The game was delayed for several minutes in the bottom of the sixth inning when fans in the bleachers threw beer mugs onto the field. The Reds left the field until the ground crew cleared the debris.

Injured Kerr hopes to help Flyers

People on the inside don't paint as optimistic a picture. If Kerr does regain enough feeling in his arm to try to play, will it last? And can Keenan afford to sit somebody else out just to dress a power-play specialist, when one or two opportunities is all you will get on most nights during the playoffs?

On a more optimistic note, two injured Flyers have a good shot at being in the lineup for Game 2 tonight. They are Lindsay Carson, who suffered a whiplash-type injury and sprains in the sterno-clavicular joint in the fifth game against Montreal, and Murray Craven (broken foot, Game 6 vs. Rangers).

as Des Moines if a good course is ficial, but there is a scheduling conflict in the Northlands Coliseum for Saturday, May 30, the date of Game 7. That might necessitate moving the game to Sunday, May 31. The alternative is a 9 pm. start on Saturday, which means 11 p.m. in the East, which is not palatable for television.

BLASE DEPARTMENT. The Oilers announced their first sellout of the playoffs. Inflated prices and the lack of a series with Calgary this year are the consensus reasons for the ICEBERGS. Sunday night was playoff game No. 20 for the Flyers. They are assured of breaking the Stanley Cup record for most games in one playoff year (22) set by Calgary last season. ... The Flyers, who hadn't lost at Northlands Coliseum in five games over three seasons before the 1985 finals, now have lost seven straight. . . . Keenan spotted a defensive pair of Kjell Samuelsson and Daryl Stanley and kept the Mark Howe-Brad McCrimmon and Brad Marsh-Doug Crossman units intact. Keenan again scratched J.J. Daigneault, who has been medically cleared to play on his ankle (slight ligament tear in the Ranger series).

Bullard says competition helps his game

tryouts were told that the other two teams would be selected soon. Bullard, who played for the U.S. Jones Cup team last summer in Taiwan, is optimistic about his chances at being selected.

"I was happy with the way I played," said the 6-10 forward, who averaged 16.4 points as a sophomore and was fourth in the Big Eight in rebounding. "I'm really hoping to make one of the teams, because if I don't I won't have that competition to go against this summer."

Bullard was especially impressed with the performance of Manning. He also said that Marble played well. He drove the ball to the basket and was scoring really well."

Bullard didn't play much against Armstrong during the trials, and said Grayer's recent ankle surgery slowed him down.

"They were asking Jeff to play guard, and it was tough for him to move like he wanted to," Bullard said. "He showed me the scar on his ankle and I don't see how he was able to play, let alone play as well as he Close said that Grayer "played very well, considering the condition he was in. He's a fine basketball player, and if he gets completely healthy, he'll have a super year next season.'

Close also said both Hawkeyes played well in the trials.

'I thought Roy played very hard and aggressive," he said. "He took two or three charges the first game I saw, and his offense got better and better as the weekend went on.

"I was very impressed with B.J. He played as well as he could have, considering this was the first time he had performed against this level of competition. He did a solid job."

Playing against the nation's top collegians has shown Bullard where his game has improved and where he needs work. "I feel my defense has really improved," he said. "I felt I played good defense at the trials, and I was using my quickness better against the bigger guys. On offense, I am able to get open easier and get my shots off." Bullard has added 10 pounds to his 200-pound frame since the end of the season, and he said the added strength "has helped me a lot. I still can't bang with the guys who weigh 260 pounds, but I guess I'll never be able to do that. I'm happy with the way my game has come along." Through his competition against the nation's best talent, as well as the international experience he gained last summer, Bullard has added what he calls "tricks of the trade" to his basketball arsenal.

"I've picked up things like taking the ball to the basket without getting it blocked, or stealing the ball on defense without getting called for a foul," he said.

Oglivie hits grand slam for Buffaloes

TOKYO, JAPAN (AP) — Ben Oglivie, formerly of the Milwaukee Brewers, hit a grand slam to power the Kintetsu Buffaloes to a 9-0 Japanese baseball victory over the Lotte Orions on Tuesday.

The Nippon Ham Fighters edged the Hankyu Braves, 6-5, on a threerun home run in the second inning by Tony Brewer, formerly of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Purdue wins in overtime

NEWCASTLE, AUSTRALIA (AP) Melvin McCants scored 36 points and Everette Stephens added 29 as Purdue's basketball team outlasted the Newcastle Falcons, 143-128, in overtime Tuesday in an exhibition game.
