like I'm leading off. I just try to hit the ball where it's pitched." The Cubs made it 2-1 in the fourth on Andre Dawson's leagueleading 59th RBI, but they stranded two runners.

Leon Durham's drive to right was nabbed on the run by Jose Oquendo. Mumphrey should have tagged up and gone to third after the catch, Michael said. "When you know you can get over to third with no outs, you tag up. That's the rule."

Jody Davis flied out to left, a drive that possibly could have scored Mumphrey if he had been on third, and Keith Moreland grounded into the third out.

The Cubs ran themselves out of an opportunity to at least tie the game in the seventh.

Davis opened with a single off Bill Dawley, who took over after Forsch jammed his left leg beating out a hit in the fifth. Moreland was safe on a fielder's choice, and Shawon Dunston lined a hit to right. Moreland rounded second, hesitated, then decided to try for third. Oquendo's throw nailed him easily.

Hawks 'interested' in top junior goalie

By Tim Tierney Chicago Tribune

DETROIT—Jimmy Waite, the No. 1-ranked goaltender going into Saturday's National Hockey League amateur draft, hasn't been told by the Black Hawks that he's No. 1 on their shopping list.

It's the "playing hard to get" syndrome in reverse.

"If I'm available, they don't say they will draft me, but they are interested," said the 18-year-old Waite.

Waite and 15 of the top-rated prospects were showcased at a press conference Friday at Cobo Arena. The draft, which lasts 12 rounds, will be held at nearby Joe Louis Arena.

Waite, who played for Chicoutimi in the Quebec Major Junior League, is considered to be one of the top goaltending prospects to come along in a few years. The Hawks don't want to get too excited about him because they pick eighth overall. That may be too long of a wait to get Waite. "I play well under pressure," Waite said when asked what separates him from other goalies. "I think that's it. And I have a good glove hand." If Pittsburgh doesn't make Waite the fifth pick overall, Los Angeles may select him with the sixth pick.

to his visit with the Kings earlier this week. "Chicago has spoken to me, too. Minnesota a little."

If the Hawks can't get Waite, they may select defenseman Bryan Fogarty of Kingston in the On-tario Hockey League. The 6-foot-1-inch, 189-pound Fogarty said that he had yet to talk to the Hawks.

"I don't have a great preference. just want to play," said Fogarty, who later added he would like to play in Detroit.

The Red Wings, who pick 11th, brought Fogarty to Detroit to see a playoff game against Toronto.

"I met the staff. They make you feel at home," Fogarty said. "Plus, it's only 21/2 hours from home." Fogarty, a native of Brantford, Ont., has had a bad off-ice reputation brought on by curfew violations.

Roger Neilson won't be an assistant coach with the Hawks next season, but with one year left on his contract, he expects to remain with the team in some capacity. Three Los Angeles Kings made the All-Rookie team. Los Angeles center Jimmy Carson, left wing Luc Robitaille and defenseman Steve Duchesne made the squad. Rounding out the team was Vancouver right wing Jim Sandlak, St. Louis defenseman Brian Benning and Philadelphia goaltender Ron Hextall.

"I was surprised. I think when Moreland saw the big high hop, that's when he decided to go," Dunston went to second on the throw to third, so Herzog ordered an intentional walk to David Martinez. That forced Michael's hand, and he called on Gary Matthews to bat for starter Jamie Moyer. Matthews bounced into a force to end the threat.

ST. LOUIS-Manager Gene Michael has decided to start Scott Sanderson against the St. Louis Cardinals' Danny Cox Sunday. Left-hander Mike Mason was the Cubs' original choice. Sanderson lasted only 21/3 innings in his last outing, a 13-2 loss Wednesday to the New York Mets.

Steve Trout's strong outing in Thursday's minor-league game at Peoria was encouraging to the Cubs. Michael said he hopes to start him against the Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday in Chicago. "He said he felt good and didn't have any problems," said Michael, "and he threw all of his pitches. I think he'll be okay."

The Cubs plan to trim at least one pitcher from the roster when Trout and reliever Ron Davis are activated.

Cardinals ace John Tudor, whose leg was broken in April, had the brace removed Friday and is beginning rehabilitation. "He's ahead of schedule," said manager Whitey Herzog.

Cardinal reliever Ken Dayley was hospitalized Thursday night with a mild case of meningitis that is non-contagious.

Cub notes

Dayley was on the disabled list from July of last year to May 21, having developed an elbow injury that required offseason surgery. He has pitched 10 innings in eight games this season and hasn't allowed a run.

Michael, formerly with the New York Yankees, said he didn't realize the intensity of the Cub-Cardinal series when he took over the club last year. "It's just like the Yankee-Red Sox rivalry," he said. "People in this league probably don't know what that rivalry is like when those two teams are vying for a pen-nant."

After the St. Louis series, the Cubs return home to play four games with the Phillies and four with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Cubs have had three winning trips out of four.

"We have the helmets, the jumpsuits, the seat belts. Actually Indy drivers have more reason to be safety concious. They make their living at this. They can totally tear apart and rebuild their cars after a race. We can't afford to. "I'll admit that drivers of some of the open-wheeled cars have more of an opportunity to get hurt, but their cars are more maneuverable. There's less mass." Regardless of safety level, these amateurs daredevils continue to run. "I don't even think about getting hurt," Duncan said. "During practice today I was going 120 miles an hour, slid, had one wheel on dirt and the other on pavement. There were guard rails on each side, and it was kind of like a bowling alley. But I never had any fear. I just maneuvered my car." "Face it. For the most part, these cars are designed for speed and accidents," Tambourine said. "I disagree when a professional says we're not as safe. We have to be. Just like them, it's our lives out there."

Carlton Fisk had one in the second inning, and Ivan Calderon managed to move him over, but with the infield playing in, Fisk had to hold at third on Greg Walker's grounder to second.

"The key to the game was getting Walker to ground out in the second inning," said Viola (5-5).

Frazier was greeted by Ken Williams' single and Ozzie Guillen's double, and the Sox had their two runs before Twins manager Tom Kelly brought in Jeff Reardon to close out the game.

The four-run second inning that pinned the second-game loss on Scott Nielsen turned on Gagne's sharp grounder with two runners on and one out.

If Keedy had fielded the ball cleanly, the inning would have been over, but the ball ate him up, caroming off his glove into short left, where Guillen tracked it down-but not before Smalley had alertly scored from second.

Sal Butera made the hot corner even hotter for Keedy when he whistled a double past the diving third baseman. Dan Gladden's two-run single made it 4-0.

It might have been worse had not Gladden, after taking second on the throw, tried to steal third on Ron Karkovice, who gunned him down.

Nielsen, making his first start for the Sox, retired eight in a row before a one-out walk gave him more grief in the fifth. Gaetti's two-run single finished him off, and he left trailing 6-2. The Twins' final run came in the ninth when outfielders Calderon and Darryl Boston dropped consecutive fly balls. At least the Sox made the Twins sweat a little for this one. Harold Baines broke out of a 0-for-15 slump with a two-run homer in the third and contributed an RBI single to a two-run fifth that knocked out starter Mike Smithson and denied him the victory.

To the 50-year-old Duncan, who first jumped into a cockpit at age 17, and Ron Tambourine of Lake Forest, who got into the sport in 1978, there are a lot more dangerous hobbies than road racing.

"I've always felt that this is a safe sport," said Tambourine, who drives a Mazda. "I think it's more safe thah the average person driving. But I'll admit that not everyone goes about it the same way.

The Lakers were fortunate to leave Boston with a victory. Only Earvin "Magic" Johnson played consistently well in the three games there. Worthy, who tore the Celtics, apart in the first two games, is mired in a shooting slump. He was 21-for-55 in Boston, hitting at a 38 percent clip.

Fregosi does not foresee getting Harold Baines back in the outfield in the immediate future. Baines has been limited to being the designated hitter since returning from knee surgery. "He's still only 70 percent running-wise," Fregosi said. "We're going to have to leave him at the DH position." Baines was in a 1for-21 slump after going hitless in the opener. Fregosi is still hopeful that someday soon "we can put what I call our starting nine out there for a stretch of two weeks."

They would be fourth in the first round of the next supplemental draft, because Seattle has used its Bobby Thigpen's troubles continue at Hawaii, the Triple-A farm, where he was shelled for six runs on 11 hits in five innings as the starter Monday in an 11-10 loss to Phoenix.

Fregosi, shortstop Ozzie Guillen and outfielder Daryl Boston will be among the Sox offering instruction at WBBM radio's women's baseball clinic at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Comiskey Park.

The Sox don't have a player at any position among the top eight in balloting for the American League All-Star team. Bill Long's streak of scoreless innings ended at 151/3 when the Twins got four in the sixth inning of the opener.

Bosworth and his agent, Gary Wichard, said it would be "hypocritical" to change their plans to sit out.

"We're not bluffing," Wichard said.

"Seattle doesn't fit the mold want to put myself in," Bosworth said.

Seattle general manager Mike McCormack said the Seahawks employ starting players, including star safety Ken Easley, who sent out letters warning the Seahawks not to draft them.

no predictions were reported by National Football League union leaders here Friday.

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said he remains optimistic that a strike this fall can be avoided. But he warned that history tells him management "always has tested us and always has forced some type of work stoppage. I don't see this round being different."

Upshaw said pro football can't afford a strike because it will soon ask the public to buy the product on TV and can't alienate fans the way the 57-day strike did in 1982.

"We've seen the NFL take the first step with ESPN. That's the beginning of pay per view. We can't very well as an industry make that step unless we have fan support," Upshaw said.

For the first time, the NFL made cable part of its television package when it included ESPN along with the three free networks.

Neither Upshaw nor union president Marvin Powell mentioned free agency until a reporter brought it up. Upshaw said free agency is only one of eight "horizontal" demands in their bargaining proposal, even though the union's published "game plan"

The make or break is if they [management] negotiate in good faith," Upshaw said.

He noted that 92 percent of union members have authorized a strike, giving the union "a loaded gun" in negotiations. The Bears approved a strike by a much smaller margin, but Upshaw called them a "strong union team." No Bears attended the press conference held in conjunction with Sunday's Mackey Awards banquet for the Better Boys Foundation.

Powell said the No. 1 union priority is "to get meaningful movement in negotiations." He said management's response to union proposals was "typical. They said it was interesting. They said no."

The two sides have their third meeting scheduled for next week.

"I feel management is willing to negotiate in good faith," Upshaw said. "The only thing that could cause a strike is management's refusal to bargain in good faith."

The collective bargaining agreement expires Aug. 31. "I don't sense from the players that we have to get a new agreement tomorrow," Upshaw said. Does that mean they will play without a contract? "We'll make those decisions when the time comes," he said.
