Byars hopeful as foot heals

PHILADELPHIA, PA. (AP) Philadelphia Eagles running back Keith Byars, whose broken right foot healed slowly in 1985, is hoping the recuperation from his broken left foot is going faster this time around. There is no definite timetable on Byars' return from the broken fifth metatarsal of the left foot, an injury he incurred May 2 during a passing drill at the NFL club's minicamp.

But the Eagles' No. 1 draft pick in 1986 said he is encouraged by his most recent visit to his orthopedic surgeon, Jack Hughston. The X-rays, taken the second week of June, were so good that Hughston put him in a walking cast.

CHICAGO, ILL. — A federal grand jury investigation into the activities of New York-based agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom is about to intensify, with indictments expected within 60 days.

Many of the 60 current and former college football and basketball players who have been subpoenaed will testify before the grand jury here during the next month. U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas and Assistant U.S. Attorney Howard M. Pearl spent much of Monday and Tuesday formulating a schedule for testimony, sources numerous college athletes and signing them to representation contracts, a violation of NCAA rules. They have denied breaking any laws.

The sources said Valukas and Pearl are ready to accelerate their case after a lengthy fact-finding mission that included a nationwide FBI investigation.

Athletes Fraudulent?

Sources have said charges of fraud, extortion and violation of the RICO (Racketeering Influenced Corrupt Organizations) Act are being considered against the agents by the grand jury. Several athletes also have been told they face possible fraud and tax evasion charges.

The U.S. Attorney believes the athletes committed fraud when they signed documents that recertified their athletic scholarships, stating they had done nothing to jeopardize the scholarship after accepting money from the agents. Tax evasion is a possible charge if the money was not reported as income.

Sources placed the expense of the investigation already in the hundreds of thousands.

Many of the college athletic programs whose athletes have been subpoenaed are nervously awaiting the outcome of the investigation. Some players with eligibility remaining have been subpoenaed. Numerous college athletic directors say they have been denied information on the case by the U.S. Attorney and the

Perjury Possible

The exception was the FBI's disclosure to the University of Alabama that basketball center Derrick McKey had received money from and signed a contract with Walters. McKey lost his senior season of eligibility. The FBI agent has been reprimanded, sources said.

However, sources said the U.S. attorney is more likely to cooperate with the colleges after indictments are returned by the grand jury. Only a handful of athletes and at least two of Walters' employees Terry Bolar and former NFL wide receiver Ron Jessie - have already testified before the grand jury, which convened on May 19.

Sources said at least one of those athletes faces a charge of perjury because he allegedly did not tell the truth about when he received money from Walters. The player changed his story when evidence was produced to dispute his testimony, sources said.

Since that incident, attorneys representing players have negotiated delays in testimony to better familiarize themselves with the case.

Many attorneys defending players do not expect Valukas to come down hard on the athletes because many are regarded as unintelligent.

Maltbie harbors soft spot for Quad Cities

By RICK BROWN

Register Staff Writer

Professional golfer Roger Maltbie has always had a soft spot in his heart for the Quad Cities area.

His debut victory on the Professional Golfers Association Tour came in the 1975 Quad Cities Open. He also met his wife, Donna, during one of his trips to the event.

He played in the British Open last year at Turnberry, but has instead decided to play this year's Hardee's Golf Classic next week at the Oakwood Country Club in Coal Valley, Ill.

"Maltbie usually plays in our tournament, but he went to the British Open last year because he had relatives there [in Scotland]," Hardee's tournament chairman Jim Epperly Maltbie, who has won five tournaments in his career, is 41st on this year's money list with $137,286. Two-time U.S. Open champions Hale Irwin and Andy North are also in the field, as are Jim Thorpe and Doug Tewell.

"We're excited about the addition of Irwin," Epperly said. "We've been trying to get him here for several Defending champion Mark Wiebe and runner-up Curt Byrum are also committed to this year's tournament, which has boosted its purse to $500,000. The winner will receive a $90,000 check.

Dave Rummells of West Branch, 55th on the PGA money list with $113,725, is entered, as is rookie Mike Bender of Waterloo.

Epperly said exemptions have been given to allow area players Greg Ladehoff of Clinton, Eugene Elliott of Bettendorf, Todd Hamilton of Oquawka, Ill., and Clark Burroughs, formerly of Waterloo, to participate.

Ladehoff was on the PGA Tour last year, but didn't win enough money to keep his tour card. Elliott has been playing the Asian Tour. Hamilton, who won his third straight Riverboat Days Amateur title in Clinton last month, will be making his pro debut. Burroughs is a former NCAA champion now playing on the Tournament Players Association Tour.

Epperly said officials are hoping for another 15 or 20 commitments. One notable player who is a possibility is John Mahaffey.

MORE QUALIFIERS. The PGA Tour has decided to increase the number of qualifying spots for the Hardee's Golf Classic from four to eight. Qualifying will be held Monday at Emeis golf course in Davenport. Entry fee is $100 and the eight qualifiers will have their entry fee paid into the tournament. Contestants must contact Emeis professional Jim Hasley by Friday to confirm their tournament. A banquet honoring former champions will be held Saturday evening. Former tournament director Harry Burrell will also attend. Sunday morning, former champions Harold Skow of Newton and Max Shelton of Cedar Rapids will tee off with several other Masters veterans in a senior event.

Eight former champions, including defending titleholder Darrell Chivington of St. Joseph, Mo., headline this year's Masters field. Ten of the top 20 players in last year's Amateur of the Year point standings have also entered.

KING-SIZE FIELD. Betsy King, who currently leads the Ladies Professional Golfers Association money list with $302,806, is one of 14 players who will compete in the Barb Thomas Pro-Am Classic Sept. 1 at Brooks golf course in Okoboji. King, the LPGA's Player of the Year in 1984, is a top contender for the award this year. A winner of more than $1 million in her career, King has won three tournaments this season. Jody Rosenthal, a former teammate of Thomas at the University of Tulsa, is another winner this year who will be coming to Okoboji. Also entered is 1985 U.S. Open champion Kathy Baker. The remaining field is made up of Alice Miller, Tammy Fredrickson, Janet Coles, Therese Hession, Jane Crafter, Joan Delk, Stephanie Farwig, Laura Hulburt, Cindy Mackey and Cindy Ferro.

Amateurs interested in playing should contact Paulette Frick at the Camp Foster YMCA in Spirit Lake.

NIELSEN RETURNS. Former lowan Lon Nielsen, now the director of golf at the Crag Burn Golf Club in East Aurora, N.Y., has once again played his way into next month's PGA Championship. Nielsen, one of 40 club pros who earned invitations, had an excellent tournament last year at the Inverness Club in Toledo, Ohio. He tied for 11th at even-par 284. This year's tournament is to be played August 6-9 at the PGA National Champions course in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.

Many top golfers skipping tourney

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. (AP) -The 156-man field for the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic that starts today includes just four of the top 20 money winners this year and few of the glamor names of the sport. Many of this year's top golfers have elected to skip the tournament and prepare for next week's British Open in Scotland.

But defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller said that will not detract from the quality of play.
