Practice is under way for Shrine game

By DAN McCOOL Register Correspondent

CEDAR FALLS, IA. — Training camp for the 15th annual Iowa High School Shrine Bowl football game opened Tuesday as 90 graduated high City and Bob Edwards of Fort Dodge. school seniors checked in for practices leading up to the Aug. 1 game.

"We think we've got some outstanding football players in all areas," said South Coach Dave Clement of Ottumwa, adding that his offensive line could average 250 pounds

"We have a good, physical-looking group of young men," said Crestwood of Cresco's Bob McNew, coaching the North team.

One of the South players is T.J. Rubley of Davenport West, the fourth member of his family to play quarterback in the Shrine Bowl. Other South players include Dave Turner of Clinton, Matt Christensen of West Des Moines Valley, Doug Scott of Iowa City West, Mike Fontana of Ankeny and Larry Ratigan of Council Bluffs St. Alberts.

The North team includes Davis Bean of Cedar Falls, Jim Albaugh of

Marion Linn-Mar, Shefield-Chapin's Matt Brinkman, Scott Bailey of Pocahontas, Brad Dinsdale of Webster

McNew said he likes the quickness of his receivers, running backs and defensive backs. He said quarterbacks John Vanderloo of Sioux City East and Troy Alexander of Waterloo East will pass as much as 70 percent of the game "if we can create enough problems for them."

Clement said a key to victory by the South will be to keep the North passing game in check.

Penrith faces

By BRUCE JAPSEN Register Correspondent

IOWA CITY, IA. — The same judge who gave Brad Penrith a suspended jail sentence for a drunken driving conviction could decide today whether the University of Iowa wrestler should be allowed to withdraw guilty pleas entered last month on two other misdemeanor charges.

Penrith's lawyer, Douglas Russell of Iowa City, said last week that Penrith did not understand his guilty pleas or their consequences. If the pleas are allowed to stand, Penrith may have to serve 86 days in jail on two prior convictions.

Penrith has asked Johnson County District Court Judge John Sladek to let him change his plea of guilty on charges of disorderly conduct and public intoxication. Penrith was charged after a fight outside of an Iowa City bar last month.

Penrith had asked Magistrate Bruce Goddard for permission to withdraw his pleas. Goddard refused.

In court documents filed Tuesday, the Johnson County attorney's office said Penrith knew what the ramifications of the guilty pleas would be after being given a 28-day suspended jail sentence on a drunken driving charge earlier.

When Sladek sentenced Penrith in that case, according to the county attorney's office, he asked him if he understood that he could be sentenced again if he broke any other laws. The county attorney's office said Penrith indicated that he did.

Penrith, 22, who won the NCAA wrestling title at 126 pounds in 1986 and placed second in 1987, has been suspended from the team.

Carter's attorney petitions jail if his pleas NFL for supplemental draft

NFL's chief spokesman said Tuesday that while Commissioner Pete Roz> to permit Ohio State wide receiver Cris Carter to enter supplemental draft, such a decision would be unprecedented. Berry, Carter's attorney, > > said he mailed a pe-

the league on behalf

CARTER of Carter, who was declared ineligible for his senior season for signing a contract and accepting money from sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

Carter is considered by NFL scouts to be a potential first-round pick in next year's draft.

Joe Browne, the NFL's chief spokesman, said the league had received Carter's request but no timetable had been set for action. Browne said that while Rozelle has the power to grant special eligibility, such a request on Carter's behalf would be

"I don't believe in past years ... have we ever received a request for special eligibility based on the fact that the player was declared ineligible due to receiving money from an agent," Browne said.

The NFL, under an informal agreement with college football, has refused to accept players who have not graduated, have not used their eligibility or whose class has not graduat-

COLUMBUS, OHIO (AP) - The supplemental drafts for players who remain eligible to play for their college teams but elect to graduate early. Linebacker Brian Bosworth of elle has the power

Oklahoma, who graduated but retained a year of eligibility, was chosen by the Seattle Seahawks last month and Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar, who graduated early, was drafted the same way in

"What we would be talking about is special eligibility granted by the commissioner," Browne said. "He does have, as part of his authority, the tition Monday to right to grant special eligibility. It's been done on a handful of occasions.

In 1977, Notre Dame's Al Hunter was suspended from school for a dormitory violation and not permitted to play football. Rather than wait a year to be reinstated to school and retain his final season of eligibility for the college team, Hunter sought special eligibility from the NFL and was drafted by the Seahawks in a supplemental draft. Notre Dame spokesman John Heisler said the NFL apparently decided to permit the supplemental draft because Hunter's class had graduated in June 1977, two months before the supplemental draft.

In Carter's case, however, the school is opposed.

Ohio State football coach Earle Bruce said Monday that he had registered his objections to a supplemental draft for Carter.

"I talked with a person in Pete Rozelle's office. I told them I am vehemently opposed to anyone signing with an agent, and then being able to go to the National Football League," Bruce said.

Cal Ripken is manager of the Baltimore Orioles, a thankless task although it pays well. Any man presently holding this job for more than 36 hours needs a sense of humor. Cal proved he has one recently while speaking to a gathering in Boston.

"My doctor told me to get more exercise, but I told him it's not a problem. I get eight or nine walks to the mound each night," quipped a field boss whose reliable starters mostly consist of Mike Boddicker.

While that was a mighty fine quip, it intrigued me mostly by exposing one of the weakness of record keeping in sports. What is the major-league career record for number of round trips made by a manager to confer with a pitcher? And what does that translate to in terms of yardage? No one knows.

Once again, a game that keeps statistics up to and including the number of times a left-handed outfielder has for a fly ball to descend has let us down. The logical way to treat this situation is illogically.

Thanks to a newspaper clipping, can report that in 1962, when the California Angels finished third, Manager Bill Rigney hauled himself out of the dugout 353 times to amble out to where the pitcher stood and removed that particular pitcher.

Counting an average of 160 feet per round trip, Rigney wound up walking nearly 46,000 feet, or close to nine bad news. Mind you, this doesn't include the hundreds of other times he trudged out, loosened up the pitcher by kidding about that smashing blonde in a box seat behind first base, then returned to the dugout without having lled in a reliever.

that Cornelius McGillicuddy, better | recruited to work for Penn Corp and known as Connie Mack, would far | play softball, but not necessarily in outdistance all other managers as the | that order. Eight, including Coach all-time career leader in number of | Gale Kurtz, a junior partner, work for trips made to the mound to change | Penn Corp. pitchers. Mack was field boss at Pittsburgh for three seasons before a 50-year stretch as manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

The fact is, Mack probably made fewer such trips in his 53-year career than Rigney did in that one season. Also the owner of the club and a man of great dignity, Connie managed in street clothes. By baseball rules, he was ineligible to invade the playing turf once the game was on.

Connie would sit in his favorite dugout spot with a rolled-up game program in hand, waving it to position the outfielders for particular hitters. When it was necessary for someone to confer with the pitcher, the boss dispatched a minion.

Mack and Burt Shotton of the Brooklyn Dodgers are the last to not wear a baseball uniform while managing. Both retired at the end of the 1950 season. Whichever had the game that ended latest that year is the last to not make a trip to the mound in an entire season.

OTHER SPORTS also have done a shabby job on keeping track of some of the important stuff. Sam Snead allegedly fired 21 caddies during the week of one U.S. Open golf tournament. If anyone has ever fired faster, the world has a right to know.

How many miles has Kareem Abdul-Jabbar jumped into the air shooting skyhooks in his whole life, counting four years in high school, four at UCLA and about 4,000 as a pro?

How many pairs of tennis shoes has Chris Evert gone through since getting her first permanent wave?

How many times has A.J. Foyt pulled into the pit and said, "Fill 'er up," since his right shoe first came into contact with the foot feed on an Indianapolis-type racing car?

How many foot pounds of energy did Billy Martin expend kicking dirt over home plate as a player or manager to show his disgust?

What is the record number of times goldie throat Harry Caray has decreed a bovine animal to be spiritually pure during the course of a nine-inning baseball game?

What is the American record for saying "you know" during the course of any one sports interview lasting no more than 43 seconds?

How many, if any, of Snead's caddies that year wound up with a tip? Columnist's note: Advising a person to "Get lost" doesn't qualify as the type of tip I had in mind.

Who was the first football player to put his pants on one leg at a time?

Sadly, answers to the above questions are nowhere to be found in the literature of our times. If this civilization vanishes, archeologists of the future won't ever be able to dig up such pertinent information. Or promptly rebury it, either.

not just folks at Festival

Sioux City softball club seeks gold medal tonight

By MARC HANSEN Register Staff Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. - Softball, they tell us, is the game real, everyday kind of people play.

Not at the U.S. Olympic Festival. There aren't many real, everyday kind of people on the North squad, which came to North Carolina disguised as the Penn Corp Financial team from Sioux City, Ia.

The only real people hanging out Tuesday afternoon at Lion's Park were in the stands, broiling.

While North pitcher Jimmy Moore was throwing a no-hitter, the real people were exceeding medium rare on the way to well done. With the temperature heading toward 100 degrees, the park was an outdoor barbecue.

Against Moore, the South squad almost resembled real people.

But real, next-door-neighbor kind of people don't play big-time fast pitch softball. They play slow pitch in the recreation or company league. The receptionist plays right field, the kid from the mail room is the shortflipped his sunglasses while waiting | stop and the boss plays wherever she wants and bats clean-up.

And if they do play fast pitch, chances are they don't play it as well as Penn Corp, the national runner-up a year ago. The guys from Penn Corp are 4-2 going into tonight's gold medal game against the East.

That assures that at least one Iowan will win a gold medal. Steve Kerian of Cedar Falls plays for the East team.

The teams here qualified for the Festival by finishing in the top four at miles, for the purpose of delivering | the national tournament in Seattle, Wash., last September.

Blyleven pitches 7-hitter to nail the 2-1 victory

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. (AP) - It had been 11 games since Minnesota's Kent Hrbek, once one of basebail's most feared clutch hitters, had driven in a run.

To the chagrin of the American League East-leading New York Yankees, however, the streak didn't reach 12 Tuesday night as Hrbek's ninth-inning single scored Gary Gaetti from second base in the A.L. Westleading Twins' 2-1 victory.

"I knew I hadn't been driving in any runs, but I didn't feel like I was struggling," Hrbek said. "I was just going up there and trying to hit the ball hard some place."

Gaetti started the rally with a leadoff double off reliever Tim Stoddard (2-2). Stoddard intentionally walked Tom Brunansky and gave way to Pat Clements, whose second pitch was lined into center field by Hrbek.

The game was also highlighted by Bert Blyleven's seven-hitter. The Minnesota right-hander struck out eight batters, giving him 3,195 strikeouts for his 18-year career and moving him past Ferguson Jenkins into eighth place on the all-time list.

Blyleven dueled Ron Guidry, who allowed six hits, struck out four and walked none in eight innings.

The Yankees went ahead, 1-0, in the first inning on Claudell Washington's double and Dave Winfield's single. In the fourth, Brunansky's two-out homer tied the game. The 439-foot shot, on Guidry's 3-1 pitch, was Brunansky's 21st homer. The Twins set a club fielding record by playing their ninth straight errorless game. The A.L. record is 12, set by the 1963 Detroit Tigers, while the major-league mark is 15, by the 1975 Cincinnati Reds.

Laudner takes dim view of lights

By RANDY PETERSON Register Staff Writer

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. - Iowa native Tim Laudner can't bear to look at what he means to the Minnesota Twins.

who was born in Mason City, Ia., only because it was convenient - is going through one of the biggest offensive droughts of his life, with a .194 batting average. Yet, he continues to hold the No. 1 catching position for the Twins.

"This slump has gotten so bad that I can't even stand to look at the scoreboard anymore," said Laudner, referring to the Metrodome scoreboard that flashes a player's offensive statistics each time he steps to the plate. 'I don't even want to look up there and see how bad it is. I know I'm not a career .300 hitter. But I also know I'm a heck of a lot better than .190."

While he isn't hitting for much of an average, he is managing to hit for power. Heading into Tuesday night's game here against the New York Yankees, Laudner had a majorleague personal high of 12 home runs. His previous best was 10, last year and in 1984. His professional high was 42, at double-A Orlando.

"That's about the only satisfaction throughout this whole stupid slump," said Laudner, 29. "I've still got the capability to hit the long ball on occa-

TWINS MANIA. For years, one of the most popular things to do in this progressive town was to walk through the sophisticated skywalk system downtown. Now it seems people are recognizing that under the Metrodome's big white top on the eastern edge of downtown Minneapolis lies a baseball team contending for a division championship, not the starring role in the sequel to the "The Bad News Bears."

People are flocking to the "Dome" at a record rate this season. The Twins went over the million mark in attendance on the earliest date ever when they drew 34,966 to Monday's game against the Yankees here, sending their attendance this season to 1,024,261. Monday was the ninth straight home game in which they have drawn more than 20,000 fans. The record is 13, which was set in

They seem destined to break the attendance record for a season, which is 1,651,814 in 1985.

"Baseball is a family culture," said Carl Pohlad, the Twins' owner who lived in the Valley Junction section of West Des Moines until graduation from West High School in 1934. "Mom and Dad can bring the entire family to a game, and for 21/2 hours they will have the same thing in common, that being to enjoy the game. We've provided them wholesome and clean entertainment, and the Dome provides a perfect setting no matter what the weather conditions may be outside. That's all they want."

Tom Mee, director of media relations for the Twins, said Iowa provides the second-best market for the
