Walters, Alabama Reach 200G Accord

Sports agent Norby Walters will avoid criminal charges by paying the University of Alabama more than $200,000 and agreeing not to deal with Southeastern Conference athletes, according to a settlement announced yesterday in Tuscaloosa by state Attorney General Don Siegelman.

Walters, a New York-based sports and entertainment agent, faced misdemeanor charges for his dealings with former Alabama basketball players Derrick McKey and Terry Coner. The university lost $253,447 in tournament revenue when the NCAA learned the players had been playing under contract with Walters during the latter part of the 1986-87 season.

Siegelman said Walters has paid the university $50,000 and has offered a bank letter of credit guaranteeing $163,500 over the next two years.
