Perry's therapy involves all of us

I am sure we all want to help William Perry overcome his eating problems. The Bears certainly do and are full of guilt and shame that they ever noticed that Perry was ff-. I almost said a no-no.

Hereafter, none of us is allowed to use the word. I'm going to have to spell it. None of us is to use the word f-a-t.

Bad therapy. Bad aftercare. So, if we see Perry in a shopping mall or looking through a bakery window, we shall encourage him by saying things like: "Is that you, William? I didn't see you standing behind that rake." We must be ready with the reinforcing compliment, such as on one of his formless sports jackets. We should say, "Texture makes a daring statement," rather than, "Nice upholstery."

This is to help Perry's self-image and, I guess, convince him that the rest of the world also prefers its meals from a blender.

What we have to do to help Perry is lie to him. We are not to notice that, after nearly a month in calorie detox, he is still enormously f--, I almost did it again.

He is still enormously husky.

Big boned.

The important thing is he is going in the right direction. At his present rate of shrinkage, Perry will be a normal-sized human being before most of us pay off our mortgages.

What we must be aware of is that Perry cannot carry on alone. His friends and fans must forget that the only reason anyone paid attention to him in the first place was that he was large and goofy and natural, a kind of community pet, encouraged to graze for our amusement.

We must accept the responsibility for his condition and help to undo it. Our applause and our attention were never for his skills as an athlete but for his skills as a very overweight athlete.

More than that, it was because he got that way from familiar and wholesome appetites, just like the rest of us, adding to his bulk from the supermarket and not from the pharmacy.

In the future, then, if Perry should happen to pick up a fumble and outrun a sprinter to the goal line, we should not slap the guy on the next bar stool on the back and shout, "Wow, look at that lardbelly go!" but sneer in disgust, "Steroids are prettier."

This must be a community effort. We must change what we approve of. Alas, that means we must dump those broad-based Refrigerettes, though I will not volunteer to carry any of them to the curb. If the Bears are willing to stop taking money away from Perry for abusing their scales—a rather pointless gesture, anyhow, since the rest of the world was throwing money at him for being huge—the least we can do is overlook Perry's resemblance to cer-

By Maurice Possley and James Warren A long-brewing scandal over

payments of money to college athletes by Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, New York sports agents who allegedly induced players to sign improper contracts, is expected to result in federal grand jury indictments

Wednesday in Chicago. The indictments would culminate an 18-month FBI investigation of the two men that began in March, 1987, following the beating of Kathe Clements, who along with Chicago agent Steve Zucker, had signed up two players who had broken ties with Walters and Bloom and their business, World Sports & Entertainment. Legal sources in the defense community, who asked to remain anonymous, said Tuesday that they had been informed that the indictments would be announced this week.

U.S. Atty. Anton Valukas, who, along with Assistant U.S. Atty. Howard Pearl, has conducted the investigation, declined comment.

However, Valukas' office late Tuesday issued a terse advisory that a Wednesday press conference would reveal "three indictments in connection with the management and representation of professional athletes and Walters and Bloom, which has

Bears fear Wilson out at least 5 weeks

By Fred Mitchell

Tuesday's medical report could drop the Bears to their knees.

Starting left-side linebacker Otis Wilson could miss five weeks or more because of possible ligament damage to his left knee. He underwent a knee scan Tuesday. Results will be made available Wednesday.

In addition, linebackers Mike Singletary and Dante Jones are nursing minor knee problems.

"My foot just got caught in the turf and I twisted it and everybody fell on it," Wilson said of the injury he sustained in the second quarter of Monday night's 17-9 preseason loss to the Dallas Cowboys.

"It buckled and popped on him," said trainer Fred Caito. "There is possible ligament damage, possible cartilage. It's tough to say until we get the results of the test."

The 6-foot-2-inch, 227-pound Wilson, who injured his right knee last year and missed four games with a partially torn medial collateral ligament, did not feel the injury was that serious Monday night. He even limped off the field on his own after being treated by the trainers.

But the ominous accumulation of blood around the knee overnight warranted a closer look. A scan was scheduled at Highland Park Hospital Tuesday afternoon by team physician Dr. Clarence

"It looked like he got hit from the front and the side at the same time," coach Mike Ditka said of the eight-year veteran. "They can scan the knee to see which ligaments are intact. We feel right now that Otis has an anterior cruciate [ligament] problem and also a cartilage problem on the outside of his knee.

"If that's true, then he'll have to have the surgery and he'll be gone for a long time. If it's not true and everything is intact and it's just a cartilage, then it would just be a scope and he'd probably be out four to five weeks. If it is a cruciate problem, then it could be a long

"The first impression our doctor had was that ideally he would have gone right in there and taken a look and found out immediately if it was what he thought it was. And they would have opened it up to repair it. But this scan thing should be able to tell pretty much what's going on in there. This is the latest thing, and they X-ray the ligaments."

Few want to face 'Reality'

The owners and trainer of Cutlass Reality were tempted to put their horse on a plane back to California after the weights came out Tuesday for Saturday's Grade II $500,000-added Budweiser Hawthorne Gold

Instead, they decided keep their Horse of the Year candidate, who was assigned 124 pounds, at Hawthorne, where his presence is proving to be a

Because Cutlass Reality is here, most of the trainers of the 18 other nominees want their thoroughbreds to be somewhere

At present, Cutlass Reality has only two definite opponents, Cryptoclearance and Manzotti, for the 52d running of the 11/4mile test on the dirt.

Racing secretary Frank Arsenault is attempting to hustle two other nominees of considerably lesser stature, General Silver and Chariot of War, to prevent it from becoming a three-horse race. When there are just three starters, there usually is win wagering only.

Another major race for older horses, Monmouth Park's Grade $500,000-added Iselin Handicap, also is scheduled for Saturday, and the 11/8-mile event will ure two brand names on the Gold Cup nomination list, Alysheba and Bet Twice.

Alysheba was assigned 125 pounds for the Gold Cup and 124 for the Iselin, while Bet Twice was assigned 122 for the Hawthorne race and 123 for the Cutlass Reality, who has stolen Alysheba's thunder in California with five straight powerful victories, and Cryptoclearance also were nominated for the Iselin. Cutlass Reality was asked to carry 123 pounds, a pound less than his Hawthorne assignment, three racing days after coming back from a hairline fracture of his right leg.

Hawthorne jockey star Pat Valenzuela

went back on the disabled list Tuesday,

"Pat aggravated the injury yesterday [Monday]," said Valenzuela's agent, Alan Monat. "His horse [Navy E, in the fourth race] lunged in the post parade, and Pat twisted the leg. He complained of pain and took off the rest of his

"He had made a commitment to work Cutlass Reality Tuesday morning, and he did. But after the workout the leg bothered him a lot more, so we went to Loyola Medical Center for X-rays.

"Dr. Bill Dobozi told us there was no fracture but that what happened Monday had disturbed the healing process. Dr. Dobozi said if he aggravated the injury again, we'd be looking at three months off. He said it would be smarter for Pat to take from two to four weeks off."

Valenzuela aggravates leg injury

The leg was fractured Aug. 2 when Valenzuela was thrown from a horse in the Hawthorne starting gate. The fracture was to the fibula, a small bone between the knee and ankle.

At the time, Valenzuela was riding at a Hawthorne record-breaking clip with 46 triumphs in 216 races, giving him an 11winner lead over Earlie Fires.

Since coming back Friday, in 10 races Valenzuela recorded three victories, two places and three shows, but Fires has opened up an 11-winner lead in the jockey standings.

Valenzuela starred in southern California before moving to Chicago this summer in the wake of drug-related problems in California and New Mexico.

He tested positive for cocaine May 13 and was banned from riding at Albuquerque Downs. The ban was lifted on the condition that Valenzuela undergo weekly drug tests.

"When he applied for a license here, he offered to do it twice a week," said Bill Hartack, state steward at Hawthorne. "The fact that he volunteered helped in our decision. Since then, he has been testing in good faith, and all of the tests have been negative."

and Cryptoclearance was asked to tote 119, two pounds more than he will be rigged with locally.

For Cutlass Reality, the 124-pound Gold Cup burden is his heaviest since November of 1986, when he lugged 126 pounds to a third-place finish in Aqueduct's Grade I Vosburgh Handicap, a 7-furlong race. That was 25 races ago.

What gave owners Jim Hankoff and Howard Crash and trainer Craig Lewis reason to pause Tuesday was not so much the weight—one pound more than Cutlass Reality carried in decisively winning his last start—but rather the sevenpound spread between him and Crypto-clearance.

By Neil Milbert

On the other hand, a mini-field figures to maximize Cutlass Reality's ability to run on the lead and make it harder for stretch-running Cryptoclearance to play

Lewis flew to Chicago from his California base at Del Mar to introduce Cutlass Reality to the Hawthorne racing strip Tuesday morning. With Pat Valenzuela in the saddle, the 6-year-old chestnut leisurely breezed 5 furlongs in 1:03 4/5 with fractions of 25 4/5; 38 3/5; 51 and 1:03 4/5.

"We just wanted him to stretch his legs and get a feel for the track," said

"He's not an exceptionally good work-horse, but he's shown himself to be an exceptional racehorse.

"His races have been spaced just perfectly for him [the five-race winning streak began May 27]. He's also very smart and knows how to take care of himself. I vary his training schedule for each race a bit, depending on the situa-

"He's a dead-fit horse, and I'm sure he'd have run just as well without this

Valenzuela, Hawthorne's secondleading rider who went back on the disabled list later in the day, was impressed. "He breezed very well and finished strong," said Valenzuela. "He did it easy, too. Like all good horses, he had that special feeling about him."

In the Gold Cup, Cutlass Reality will have Gary Stevens, the No. 1 rider in North America, in the saddle.

Like Cutlass Reality, Manzotti had a Hawthorne orientation lesson Tuesday morning, galloping a mile before receiving his 113-pound Gold Cup assignment.

In 11 races this year, the 5-year-old son of 1970 English Triple Crown winner Nijinsky II has four victories, four places and one show. He has been successful in three Grade III races: the Campbell Handicap at Pimlico, the Trenton Handicap at Garden State and the Canterbury Cup Handicap in Minnesota in his last start.

Manzotti will be ridden by Eddie Maple, and Cryptoclearance, who is scheduled to arrive Thursday from Saratoga, will have the services of Jose Santos, the runner-up behind Stevens in the North American standings.

Cryptoclearance has won only one of nine races this year but has been out of the mutuel money just twice.

raised speculation by defense lawyers that organized crime figures may be involved.

Walters has repeatedly denied that he engaged in any criminal activity. Efforts to reach Walters Tuesday were unsuccessful.

The Chicago grand jury investigation has centered on allegations that Walters and Bloom gave cash payments to star college athletes before the expiration of their athletic eligibility, sources said. Such payments, which some athletes have acknowledged, are a violation of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules.

The payments were made, some allegedly as loans, to induce athletes, including football stars such as Temple's Paul Palmer, Auburn's Brent Fullwood, Iowa's Ronnie Harmon and Ohio State's Cris Carter, to sign agreements allowing Walters and Bloom to represent them in professional contract negotiations.

Harmon received at least $54,000 over two years. The National Football League Players Association confirmed Tuesday that the grand jury had subpoenaed all documents related to its own investigation of a dispute between Harmon and Walters and loom regarding the New York agents' claim that Harmon owed them substantial amounts of money that they had lent him.

Under the union's arbitration proceedings, former U.S. Sen. John Culver (D., Iowa), acting as the arbitrator, turned aside the agents' claim that that $54,000 constituted loans and allowed Harmon to keep the money.

Last May Bloom pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge in Alabama state court relating to payments made to former University of Alabama basketball players Derrick McKey and Terry Coner. As part of the agreement, Bloom agreed to testify at the trial of Walters, who also was charged with misdemeanor counts of commercial bribery, deceptive trade practice and tampering with a sports contest.

More than two dozen athletes have either been accused of or have acknowledged receiving money from Walters and Bloom. The grand jury reportedly subpoeaned more than 50 athletes to appear to testify.

On March 27, 1987, Walters and Bloom filed lawsuits against Fullwood and Clemson's Terrence Flagler alleging that the players accepted money before their NCAA eligibility expired.

On Tuesday, former Iowa State linebacker and defensive end Lester Williams said he was notified by the FBI earlier this week that Walters was about to be indicted. Williams, who was previously reported to have received about $10,000 from Walters, testified before the grand jury last winter.

Williams, now a Cedar Rapids, Ja., construction worker, said he signed with Walters the summer before his senior year. "It was kind of hard to turn down free money when it's right there," said Williams. "My family does okay. I guess it was just the timing that went along with it, and the people and the things he said to us about the stars he knew. He is a good salesman."

He added that "a lot of people don't understand that, at the time, we didn't think we were breaking any laws," Williams has agreed to perform 100 hours of community service and pay back a portion of his scholarship to Iowa State.

The investigation began following a series of events unusual in the world of college athletics.

The NFL Players Association announced in March, 1987, shortly before the attack on Clements, that two college seniors notified the union that Walters had threatened to "break their legs" after they stopped dealing with him.

Union sources said that one of the athletes was drafted and is playing in the NFL and that the other was not drafted and is not playing professional footFROM PAGE 1

On March 6, 1987, a man was fatally shot while driving a car owned by Jeff Atkins, a Southern Methodist University football player who was later subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury investigating ers. Atkins claimed he did not know the man, identified as David Simpson, and the shooting has not been solved.

A week later the New York Times reported that the FBI in Dallas had recorded a telephone conversation between former SMU wide receiver Ron Morris, now with the Bears, and Bloom during which B threatened to have Morris' hands broken if he dismissed the agents.

Two days later Clements was beaten and slashed near her Skokie office by two men wearing gloves and ski masks. Clements, the wife of Loop lawyer and former Notre Dame and Canadian Football League quarterback Tom Clements, no longer works with Zucker and no charges have been filed as a result of the incident.

Walters told the Washington Post that he came to know certain members of New York organized crime families because they frequented his restaurant two decades ago. Walters told the Post that he knew John "Sonny" Franzese, who is now in prison for a parole violation of a 1967 conviction for a series of bank robberies.

Franzese's son, Michael, told Sports Illustrated last year that he knew Walters as "Uncle Norby" while growing up and that their families socialized together.

Michael Franzese, described by federal prosecutors in New York City as a high-ranking member of the Colombo family, is currently serving a 10-year prison term in California after pleading guilty to racketeering and tax charges arising from the embezzlement of millions of dollars from more than a dozen companies.

Walters told Sports Illustrated that he had never been involved in any financial relationship with Michael Franzese.

Mondry's relaxed 66 takes U.S. Amateur lead

From Chicago Tribune wires

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—Josh Mondry, who gave up his golf scholarship at Stanford and has scaled back his playing time in recent years, shot a 4-under-par 66 to take the lead Tuesday after the first round of stroke play at the 88th U.S. Amateur. "It was a nice finish and a nice start, but I feel I'd like to be a little more consistent in between," Mondry said.

He began his round with three straight birdies and finished it in identical fashion.

Mondry, 24, of Franklin, Mich., gave up his golf scholarship after his junior year at Stanford. "I really got sick of playing," Mondry said. He is pursuing a master's degree in business at Northwestern. Closest to Mondry were Philadelphia insurance executive Jay Sigel, the last to successfully defend his U.S. Amateur title, in 1983, and Sam Stein, a supervisor for a package delivery company in Richmond, Va. They were two shots back. Defending champ Bill Mayfair shot a 71.
