Profit of Seoul Games Reported at $500 Million

The 1988 Summer Olympic Games in Seoul made a profit of nearly $500 million, more than double that of the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, the organizers said yesterday. The Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee disclosed the figure in a final report, preceding its disbanding next week.

According to the report, the Seoul Olympics, the largest in history, produced a $497-million profit. The previous record was $223 million in 1984 at Los Angeles.

Seoul's final tally put earnings at $987.5 million, with expenditures of $847.7 million, yielding a book profit of $139.8 million. But the official balance sheet did not include cash contributions, which amounted to $355.4 million.

Television rights brought in $332 million, followed by $199.8 million from sales of commemorative coins and medals, $175.8 million from lotteries, and $105.5 million from insignia sales. Also contributing to the income was $161.5 million in commissions from the sales of apartments after they were used by the 14,000 athletes from 160 nations.

1994 Olympics to Start Earlier for TV

The 1994 Winter Olympics will begin a week earlier than planned to make the Games more attractive to U.S. television networks, the Norwegian Olympic Committee said. The starting date will be moved to either Feb. 12 or Feb. 13 so the entire event can take place during the television "sweeps" that determine future advertising rates charged by the stations. The U.S. TV rights will be awarded this year.

Law Firm Supports Two Agents

Sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom were advised that they were not breaking any laws when they signed college athletes to representation contracts before their eligibility expired, two lawyers told a Chicago jury.

Attorneys with New York-based Shea & Gould said that when Walters and Bloom came to them for legal advice, they advised them that the signings violated NCAA rules but were not criminal acts. Shea & Gould, which also represents the Mets and the Yankees, acted as legal counsel for Walters and Bloom's agency, World Sports & Entertainment.

"He [Walters] asked us very clearly whether or not what he was doing was in violation of any laws and we responded in the negative," attorney Morton Shelton said. Michael Feldberg, a partner in the firm, later testified: "I informed him that he had violated the rules of the NCAA, but that the rules of the NCAA were not law. They were the rules of a private organization."

The testimony of the two attorneys came in the fourth week of the federal fraud trial of Walters, 58, and Bloom, 29.

BETS 'N PIECES: Miles End Debbie (10th) comes from a top barn and looked very promising winning a qualifier over the track in 1:58 2/5 on 3/25. Michaels Brother (1st) easily overpowered similar in his second start of the year; can only get better. Barbarian Prince (2nd) drops in company and gets Campbell; ready. Nitro Fashion (4th) has been the most consistent in recent starts; will prove difficult to beat. Take The Points (6th) showed signs of life pacing a 57 3/5 final half in her last; definitely worth following. Lockie Vance N (8th) made an uncharacteristic break before the start as the 7-5 favorite in her last; should be a strong factor if she stays flat. The Gina Giant (11th) gets in a trifle cheaper while remaining deceptively sharp, upset possibility.
