Baseball tells evidence of gambling by manager

CINCINNATI, OHIO (AP) - Baseball investigators told an Ohio judge Thursday they have extensive evidence that Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose bet on his team's games.

Special investigator John M. Dowd said the evidence includes telephone records, signed checks and betting sheets in the manager's handwriting.

But for nearly three decades, Chinese fans have not had any boxers of their own to watch. The sport, which took root in China in 1911, was banned from 1959 until March 1987 because of a public outcry over the safety of the sport.

Now China wants to improve its amateur boxing program. So it is sending four boxers and a coach to train with professionals at Gleason's Gym in New York in preparation for the 1990 Asian Games and the 1992 Olympics. They are scheduled to arrive Saturday.

At a time of protests and violence in China over demands for greater freedom, the decision to send the boxers to the United States may be politically motivated, said Leung Hak-Kim, a journalist with Sing Too Newspapers, a New York-based Chinese-language newspaper.

"The government maybe decided to let them go because it is a business deal and to show that the economic reforms and open policy remain unchanged," he said.

"It's one way to create the image that nothing has ever changed, that the suppression of students has not changed anything. Or, the government doesn't have time to take care of formal deals. They're concentrating on the students, not business or athletics." Bruce Silverglade of Gleason's Gym said: "It's a cultural exchange as well as a competitive one. What happened in China is a terrible thing. I'm appalled. But politics don't play a part in the competition between athletes." Boxers from China have competed in the Olympics only twice - in the 1936 Games in Berlin and the 1988 Games in Seoul, South Korea. The Chinese Amateur Boxing Association, organized in 1987, has more than 2,000 members, and there are 30 regional boxing teams. According to John Zhang of the Chinse Consulate in New York, the amateur boxers receive $25 a month from the government to pay for clothes, meals and equipment. But Jiang said that the quality of the training facilities and equipment is poor and that there are not enough coaches. The four boxers and their coach, who is also a boxer, who are coming to New York are all national champions. One of the boxers is middleweight Zhang Zhi, 27. He would be over 30 by the 1992 Olympics. "That's stretching things a bit," Silverglade said. "But it depends on his experience. We'll find out when he comes in." Silverglade and his partner, Ira Becker, will provide the boxers with training facilities, equipment and a trainer. Silverglade said at least one of the boxers speaks enough English to translate the instructions of the trainer, Al Gavin, who will work with them six days a week. Other expenses will be covered by Lina Hsu, owner of Le and Le Associates, the American agent for the China Sports Service Co., an agency of the government's Physical Culture and Sports Commission. She said her company would provide living quarters, meals, transportation, and medical and other expenses. MORNING REPORT "We want to develop the sport of boxing in China," she said. "We want to step into the middle of the international sports world. It's a wake-up country, a big sleeping lion in the Far East. China wants to be a modern country and it has to go into everything. We don't want to lose to Japan or Korea."

men is the track screwed up and we're taking the brunt of it," trainer Royal Roland said.

After track officials announced Thursday that the harness meet would end 20 days early and the fall Thoroughbred meet starting day would be moved up to July 26, harness horsemen said they would go to court if necessary to keep their dates.

"We're going to try and negotiate a settlement with Prairie Meadows where they would allow us to race ... through the fifth of August, as agreed in the contract," said Des Moines lawyer Ron Kuntz, who is representing the horsemen. "If that doesn't work, we might have to take other action. It might be for the courts to decide. It might be breach of contract."

Prairie Meadows took its action on the advice of lawyer Morris Knopf, who said the track has the legal right to terminate the meet.

Lack of Promotion

Harness and Prairie Meadows representatives will talk Saturday, although track officials aren't making any promises.

"We've agreed to meet with them," said Bruce Seymore, Prairie Meadows' vice president of administration. "Until then, we'll wait and see.'

The harness horsemen said Thursday that with better promotion, the meet would have made an adequate showing. Prairie Meadows President Carole Baumgarten said the harness meet has been losing from $40,000 to

Chris Rogers and other horse trainers had grim words Thursday after being told Prairie Meadows would end its harness racing season 20 days early. "It's an incredible amount of losses to the horsemen who shipped in here anticipating a two-month meet," he said. At Rogers' right is trainer Jim Coulter.

$50,000 per day.

"The thing that's frustrating to us is we feel the Iowa horsemen have done everything possible to work with the track," Roland said. "Whatever the track wanted to do, we went along with it."

Standardbred owner Junie Manatt of Brooklyn, Ia., said the horsemen shouldn't be made to pay for the track's lack of promotion.

"That's not the harness horsemen's fault," Manatt said. "We worked hard on Prairie Meadows. We spend our money on it, and now we feel like we get kicked."

Options Dismissed

Baumgarten acknowledged the track made several mistakes in marketing the harness meet but stopped short of taking the full blame.

"I'm willing to assume part of the responsibility," Baumgarten said. 'Harness horsemen need to assume part of that responsibility, too, for not producing people at the gate."

The harness horsemen said the track had other options besides stopping the meet.

"We could race for less money," trainer Jim Coulter said. "We could cut off one day of racing [per week] to help the track financially."

Baumgarten said the track's loss is too great to be affected by a purse cut. Both she and Richard Wilkey, president of the track's board of directors, said running the harness meet three days a week wouldn't be feasible, either.

"Our financial people considered that alternative," Wilkey said. "A lot of ongoing staff costs would still be there. It was not a viable alternative."

Said Baumgarten: "The fact is, we need 3,600 [people] per day for 82 days to complete the season. We believe the only way possible is to do it this way."

Baumgarten said if average attendance is less than 3,600, "Then we probably won't be running the track." Where to Race?

Should the horsemen's legal efforts fail, they will have to find a new place to race.

"Guys have shipped in the last two or three days and now they tell them they're closing down," Coulter said. "Those are the ones who are hurting.

"Other tracks are all full now," Coulter added. "These people came in and thought we'd race for two months."

Quad-City Downs racing secretary Larry Miller said other tracks may have openings, but his doesn't. "I don't have any stable stalls,"

It was baseball's first admission that it had evidence Rose bet on Reds' games.

Dowd told Judge Norbert A. Nadel testimony against Rose has been corroborated with evidence.

"There are nine witnesses who, in one way or another, have given information about Pete Rose betting on baseball or the Reds," Dowd said.

If Rose bet on the Reds, he could be banned from baseball for life.

Rose's lawyers filed suit this week trying to block a hearing Monday in New York with baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

Rose's lawyers claim Giamatti has already made up his mind that Rose is guilty - depriving Rose of his right to a fair hearing.

Rose wants the court, not Giamatti, to determine whether he bet on Reds' games.

Dowd was baseball's only witness Thursday during a hearing before Nadel, who will decide whether to give Rose a temporary restraining order, blocking the hearing with Giamatti.

Rose's lawyers will get a chance to cross-examine Dowd when the hearing with Nadel resumes today.

Rose's lawyers have characterized Dowd's report as biased, filled with hearsay and based on the testimony of a few criminals. Dowd and baseball lawyer Louis L. Hoynes Jr. rejected those contentions Thursday.

"There is evidence, substantial and heavily corroborated evidence, that Mr. Rose bet large sums of money on major-league baseball games and on games of the Cincinnati Reds," Hoynes said in his opening statement. In his testimony, Dowd gave an outline of the evidence against Rose contained in the 225-page report and seven volumes of evidence summing up the investigation. Dowd said a handwriting expert employed by baseball investigators determined the handwriting on three "betting sheets" is Rose's. The three slips indicate wagers on professional sports, including baseball games.

CHICAGO, ILL. - After 18 years as Big Ten commissioner, Wayne Duke is ready to start his new life.

"I can't wait," Duke said.

Wednesday, Duke spent his last day at the Big Ten offices in the Chicago suburb of Schaumburg. His final act was to have been participating in an athletic directors' meeting Thursday. Then, the 60-year-old Duke called it a career in his post as one of the most powerful men in intercollegiate athletics.

Brock recovers his wits in time to lift Brewers

MILWAUKEE, WIS. (AP) - Greg Brock wasn't sure how, but he drove in the winning run in the 10th inning Thursday as Milwaukee beat Kansas City, 3-2.

Milwaukee ended a 20-inning scoreless streak and tied the game on Rob Deer's two-run home run in the bottom of the ninth off Steve Farr.

But it was Brock's bizarre basesloaded grounder against a five-man infield that scored the winning run.

Paul Molitor doubled, Robin Yount drew an intentional walk and Gus Polidor singled to load the bases with one out in the 10th. Bill Pecota then entered the game as the Royals' fifth infielder. Brock hit a grounder to second baseman Frank White, who bobbled the ball but still had time to force Polidor at second. Shortstop Brad Wellman's throw back to first base was not in time to get the sliding Brock, who had stopped while run-

Hsu said she wants the boxers' training to be rigorous, "not a vacation."

"I am not going to take them to Chinatown," she said. "I want them to train very hard. No fun here. After you get a gold medal, then I'll buy you a trip here. Now, it's training first."

But Hsu said the boxers would be free to mingle with other Chinese here.

"We're on the sports side," she said, "not the political side. I want to help China. We want to prove that China has big potential."

"We'll start practice with Poholsky, Hartlieb and Rodgers in a threeway tie, but we plan to make a decision on a starter before our first game.'

That game is Sept. 16 against Oregon.

Fry said Stewart faces a battle regaining his starting job because of the progress made in spring practice by Nick Bell, a 255-pounder who was moved from fullback to running back.

"Bell just ran over our defensive team in the spring," Fry said. "Stewart will have a difficult time beating him out."

Speaking in Des Moines to officials of member stations of the Learfield Communications radio network, which carries Iowa games, Fry indicated the lines of communication between Iowa's coaches and the university's administration have improved considerably since the spring. It was then that university president Hunter Rawlings proposed barring freshmen from playing and practicing in all sports. The university's athletic board this week said that academic performance of freshmen isn't significantly harmed by participation on varsity teams. But the report, issued by a committee of the board, also showed that freshman athletes perform worse academically than non-athletes and that football- and basketball-playing freshmen have significantly lower grades than athletes of non-revenue-producing sports. "I haven't seen the report yet, but I'm anxious to look at it," Fry said. "We don't usually play more than two or three freshmen a year, but we do need them to practice." In April, Fry said he was "mad as hell" about the negative publicity Iowa's athletic program had been receiving around the nation. Testimony in the Chicago trial of sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom revealed that several notable Iowa football players had a schedule dominated by so-called "Mickey Mouse" courses and that many didn't attend classes at all.

few memories in the desk, some of them not particularly pleasant.

"From the old correspondences I found, I had arguments with people I had forgotten all about," Duke said.

Duke doesn't plan to be idle. He'll remain with the Big Ten as a paid consultant until 1993. He also is weighing what he called three attractive opportunities and said he should have a decision by July 15. The problem, Duke said, is determining how much work he wants to carry.

Whatever he decides, he knows it will pale in comparison to the time demands as Big Ten commissioner.

"I never realized until the last few weeks how all-encompassing this job has been," he said. "It'll be a sense of relief not to have the feeling of always being on call. It was a burden, and I don't mean that in a negative way. But I've put my time in."

Duke joined the NCAA in 1952 as part of its first staff and was assistant to Executive Director Walter Byers. Duke spent 11 years with the NCAA before moving to the Big Eight.

A University of Iowa graduate and Burlington native, Duke was the youngest commissioner of a major athletic conference when named at 34 to head the Big Eight. His 26 years as a conference commissioner make him second in tenure only to Asa S. Bushnell, now deceased, who served 33 years as head of the Eastern College Athletic Conference. The Big Ten has won two of the last three NCAA basketball titles and the last two Rose Bowls. Duke also leaves the member schools with $184.4 million in television contracts. "I'm proud of that," Duke said. "That'll help provide financial stability and permit the conference to pay more attention to a reform agenda" for intercollegiate sports." Duke even departs on good terms with his old adversary, Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight. At a recent dinner in Bloomington, Ind., Knight presented Duke with a championship ring from his 1987 team. Duke gave Knight an official's shirt and whistle.

Meadows horsemen hint they'll sue to keep racing

Baumgarten said she wants to have a harness season in 1990, but some of the horsemen said they didn't expect to be asked back.

"I think the horsemen think there will never be harness racing again," Roland said. "I guess we feel we don't have anything to lose by fighting this in court, because we don't think we'll be back." Roland said he was particularly disappointed in the track's marketing efforts. He noted that it took, three weeks before Prairie Meadows went to a later post time and added more exotic wagers, as harness people had pushed for. The track moved the start of weekday racing from 5 p.m. to 6:30 and added bets with potentially large payoffs such as quinellas and trifec-

"I think it can be done quickly," said trainer Jim Bader of Long Grove, Ia. "Balmoral and Hawthorne [in the Chicago area] are closing June 28, and there are quite a few other tracks to come from."

The Thoroughbred meet also struggled during the spring, finishing with $588,000 operating loss and a $500,000 purse overpayment.

And quarter horse and Thoroughbred horsemen will have to make do with smaller purses than they did in the spring. Those purses were cut back after the meet started general manager Stan Boy said Prairie Meadows wou its fall Thoroughbred purses the minimum will be drop $2,300 to $1,800. Quarter horse racing, not ly scheduled for the fall, w significant role, because have agreed to run for purse what betting generates. The at least two quarter horse day.

"We're better friends than most people realize," Duke said. "We had some differences, but we've always had a special relationship."

New CBA team hires Quad City executive

OMAHA, NEB. (AP) - Marty Heimbach, assistant general manager of the Quad City Thunder, has been named director of basketball operations for the Continental Basketball Association's new Omaha franchise.

"Those suggestions were resisted vehemently," Roland said. "When they were added, they resulted in a significant increase in handle, and we had to fight like tooth and nail to get them. It took severe failure to get them to do anything."

tas.

Once Prairie Meadows added the later post and more exotic wagering, the attendance and betting handle improved, but the harness meet's average attendance and handle -1,747and $123,698, respectively - are way below the track's projections of 2,920 and $351,182.

"Obviously, that's not as good as projected, but we've only been at it 20 days," trainer Chris Rogers said.

"To have the track show a lack of confidence can be very crippling [to harness racing]," Roland said.

Now, the question for Prairie Meadows is whether enough Thoroughbreds can be attracted to begin racing July 26.

Consorts St. Patric wins trotting series

Consorts St. Patric closed to nip Rod Donder by a nose the finals of the $11,000 Tro ries Wednesday at Prairie M In fourth place, 4½ length pace with just an eighth of a mile to go, Consorts St. Patric got up just in time to claim the winner's share of $5,500. He covered the mile in 2 minutes 1 second.

Winless in three trials before the race, Consorts St. Patric went off at odds of 11-1 and combined with Rod Donder to key a $407.60 trifecta. Marengo Bill, the 7-5 favorite, was third.

The night's biggest payoffs came in the fifth race trifecta, which returned $1,488.20, and the fifth race exacta, which paid $1,221.60.
