October 15, 1989   Publication: Chicago Sun-Times   Page: 12   Word Count: 1000

A Reporter's Report: A second Chicago lawyer will be involved in prosecuting former Adm. John Poindexter in the Iran-contra case. He is Howard Pearl, who is resigning as an assistant U.S. attorney to become assistant to Dan Webb, the independent counsel in the case. Pearl and Webb recently were on opposite sides in the conviction of sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom. . . . Mayor Daley, who wants to be squeaky clean on fund-raising, has sent reminders to all city directors and commissioners that no tickets for his Monday night rally may be sold by city employees on city time. THAT TODDLIN' TOWN: NBC's peacock will be in all its glory next weekend when many of the network's stars will assemble here for the official opening of the NBC Tower. For all you stargazers, the list includes Tom Brokaw, Jimmy Smits, Nancy Stafford, Betty White, George Wendt, Malcolm-Jamal Warner, Marsha Warfield, John Chancellor, Deborah Norville, Robert Loggia, Garrett Morris (who will open here shortly with Shelley Berman in "I'm Not Rappaport"), Marla Gibbs, Paul Shaffer, John Palmer, etc., etc.

NOW HEAR THIS: Attorney Robert Clifford, retained to represent Frank Moore, 15, an alleged victim of police brutality, is taking a novel approach in the case. Early on Monday, he will open a probate estate that would allow him to obtain investigative material with court approval. He then will appear before Judge Ben Novoselsky to ask such approval for all communication tapes, police and paramedics reports and other files dealing with the case. This tactic allows Clifford to get the information without filing a lawsuit against the city. Whether there eventually will be such a suit will be determined by Clifford's investigation of the evidence.

THE WASHINGTON WHIRL: President Bush, under great pressure to sign a bill easing restrictions on abortions, has hinted he will do so, although his personal convictions run otherwise. But before the president will sign on, he wants some clarification of language dealing with the reporting of a rape and to whom it is reported. A bipartisan weekend session is expected to resolve the problem. . . . Chicago's Daphne Wood Murray will be sworn in by President Bush on Tuesday as a director of the Institute of Museum Services, a federal agency responsible for improving museum services. Murray is the granddaughter of Robert E. Wood, long-ago chairman of Sears, Roebuck.

THE HEADLINERS: Famed songwriter Sammy Cahn brings his one-man show ("Sammy Cahn in Person: Words and Music") to the Halsted Theatre Centre on Oct. 31 for a lengthy engagement. (Guaranteed laughter.). . . Have Michael (The Franchise) Jordan and his new wife, Juanita, dated the stork? Their friends say so. . . . Chicago's Frank Galati won the prestigious University of Southern Cal's Scriptor Award for his adaptation of "The Accidental Tourist." (Galati also was nominated for a screenwriting Oscar in the last awards.)

AT THE PODIUM: New York Gov. Mario Cuomo addresses the Scopus Dinner of American Friends of Hebrew U. at the Swiss Grand Monday. . . . House Speaker Tom Foley comes to town Oct. 23 to headline a fund-raiser for Rep. Marty Russo at the Condesa del Mar in beautiful downtown Alsip. . . . And Crain's Joe Cappelletti will speak at the Chicago Communication/15 luncheon on Nov. 16 at the Hotel Nikko.

ONCE OVER QUICKLY: Here's an odd name for a rock band (if anything can be odd for rockers): An English group called the "Jack Rubies," for Jack Ruby, the man who killed Lee Harvey Oswald, alleged assassin of JFK. . . . Tiny Shimer College in Waukegan was just praised by the National Endowment for the Humanities, which recently revealed how little many college students know about history and literature. The NEH praised Shimer for requiring four years' study of Western civilization.

CURTAIN GOING UP: Title of this year's Chicago Bar Association Christmas revue, Dec. 10-16 at the Chicago Hilton and Towers, will be "Edifice Lex." The title is a tribute to the CBA's new edifice going up on Plymouth. And the trio that annually enlivens the revue will return: Len Rubin as director and Julian Frazin and Phil Citrin as writers. . . . Shakespearean actor Brian Bedford makes a one-night stand Monday at the First Chicago Center in "The Lunatic, the Lover & the Poet," his compilation of Shakespeare's finest works. . . . Dennis Farina just finished the movie "Men of Respect" and goes right into an NBC mini-series, "Blind Faith."

NEWS YOU CAN USE: Operation PUSH is planning a march on Bridgeport next Saturday as a result of the recent police brutality charges there. Let's hope everybody cools it. . . . DePaul U.'s Cherif Bassiouni was elected president of the International Association of Penal Law. He's the first American so honored. . . . It's happy time at Victory Gardens Theater, whose artistic director, Dennis Zacek, and managing director, Marcelle McVay, welcomed a son, Zachary. Oh, yes, they're married. . . . han and Megan Follows will participate in the awards, with Diane Whiteley as producer. . . . Richard Simmons made the media rounds here to hype his nifty health club in the Carillon home development in Plainfield.

PEOPLE PEEPING: Rep. Dan Rostenkowski hosting a dinner party for VIPs, including Commonwealth Edison's

James O'Connor, at Gibson's. . . . Jeff Smith, the "Frugal Gourmet," showing no frugality in devouring pizzas at Pizzeria Uno. . . . Singer Bobby Breen (remember?) being greeted by old friends at Arnie's. . . . Jerry Cosentino being honored by his 12th Ward constituents at the Martinique as "best public servant of the year." . . . And actor Sam Shepard, traveling L.A. to N.Y. by train, stopping off at Bistro 110.

WEEKEND BIRTHDAYS: Lee Iacocca, Roger Moore, Penny Marshall, Channel 5's John Coleman, John Corbally, Lillian Gish, Warren Hendricks, Morgan Finley, Mark Jones, Dori Wilson, Roger Greenfield and Nancy (Little City) Westlake. Anniversary greetings to former President Jerry Ford and Betty.

THE DEADLINE DASH: Impresario Frank Fried huddled with Jim Post at the Civic Theatre to encourage him to bring his show, "Galena Rose," to the Mississippi River gambling boat Fried will be operating. . . . Just married: WBBM newscaster Dale McCarran and Lisa Takaroff at Chez Paul; and Khalilah Ali and Rene Camacho right after the birth of their baby, Aminah. . . . And the San Francisco vs. Oakland World Series is being called, appropriately, "Bay's Ball."
