Convictions Of Walters, Bloom Are Overturned

A federal appeals court in Chicago yesterday overturned the racketeering convictions of two sports agents accused of signing athletes to contracts before their college eligibility expired. The Seventh U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the convictions of Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom on a legal technicality and did not address the mail fraud, racketeering or conspiracy counts.

This left open the possibility of retrial, but it could not be learned if prosecutors would try again for convictions.

Walters, 58, of New York, had been sentenced to five years in prison in April, 1989, and Bloom, 30, of Sherman Oaks, Calif., was given three years. "I love everybody! God bless the judges!" Walters shouted into the telephone from his Manhattan home just minutes after he learned of the reversal. "I believe justice was done," he said.

During the trial last year, the government said the two agents paid college athletes thousands of dollars to sign secret representation contracts before their eligibility had expired, a violation of NCAA rules. They also were accused of threatening to break the legs of some athletes to keep them from disregarding the contracts.

PI: Billy Was Driving

William Fischer, a private investigator, testified that Billy Martin was driving when his pickup truck went out of control last Christmas Day and smashed into a culvert. Fischer's testimony came at the trial of Detroit bar owner William Reedy, who is on trial for driving while intoxicated but has maintained that Martin was behind the wheel. Fischer said his examination of the truck the morning after the accident showed several signs that Martin, and not Reedy, was driving.

Among the signs, Fischer said, was that fabric from the left knee of the pants Reedy was wearing when the crash occurred was imprinted on the dashboard of the pickup truck just to the right of the steering wheel. That indicated that Reedy slid across from the passenger side of the vehicle on impact, Fischer said.

In addition, the private detective said a footprint in the foot well on the passenger side of the truck matched a shoe Reedy had on and that an imprint on Reedy's jacket that night appeared to have been made by the radio panel of the truck.

Fischer also said that the seat of the truck was adjusted close to the steering wheel and foot pedals of the vehicle, indicating that Martin, and probably not the bigger Reedy, was the driver, Fischer said.

Shaw a Celtic Again

Guard Brian Shaw, who played last season for Il Messaggero in the Italian league, said he will return to the Celtics this season. He previously signed a contract to rejoin the Celtics, for whom he played during the 1988-89 season, but then said he wanted to play in Italy this season. The Celtics took their case to federal court, where a judge ruled that Shaw could play only for the Celtics.

would watch out for us," Switzer said of the Oklahoma quarterback who was arrested for selling cocaine. "I was supposed to be there at 3:30 in the morning when he sold that cocaine? Or Jerry Parks [the defensive back who shot teammate Zarak Peters in January, 1989]; I was supposed to know from his ACT scores that he would shoot his roommate?"

Even in proposing reform, Switzer stumbles. He outlines that race relations lie at the root of college athletics' troubles, because many college administrators are out of touch with black athletes. And, he writes, "The road out of the ghetto is certainly not through college to the National Football League or the National Basketball Association. It has to be through mass education . . .

But his opinions on the black athlete - positively Jimmy the Greek- them only as an author, and not as a esque - do more to damage that coach.

concept than any naive administrator. "When it comes to speed and quickness and jumping, the black players have been the best for years," Switzer said. "It's a joke for anybody to say it's not true."

He is insensitive to the notion that statements such as these only promote the stereotype of the black athlete as incapable of other than athletic success, and discourage black youths from other pursuits. "White kids are out there every day, competing," Switzer said. "They're on the second team, getting their [butts] beat by the black kids."

The current Oklahoma team is loaded with Switzer's recruits and coached by Gary Gibbs, one of his assistants. In a sense, it is still very much his team. "The people I touched at Oklahoma, the players I coached, without a doubt, I made things better for them."

There is comfort now that he touches
