Big threats preceded big NBA deal

By the time it was over, Orlando center Shaquille O'Neal had entered the game, as well as Warriors draft pick Anfernee Hardaway of Memphis State.

Before the deal was nailed down, moments before the draft began, the Warriors made an unprecedented move by giving up three first-round draft picks — even though they were not entirely sure whether they would get Michigan forward-center Chris Webber or Brigham Young center Shawn Bradley in return.

As it turned out, Orlando got three draft picks and Hardaway, the Warriors got Webber and the 76ers acquired Bradley, but it wasn't easy.

"Philly was the wild card, all along," said Orlando chairman Rich DeVos.

According to DeVos, Philadelphia wanted Bradley in the worst way and was not interested in Webber. The Warriors, meanwhile, were interested in either player.

The Warriors agreed to send Orlando three first-round draft picks — in 1996, 1998 and 2000 — in exchange for the Magic's agreement to select either the 6-foot 9-inch Webber or 7-6 Bradley first.

When Orlando almost agreed to draft Bradley at No. 1, then deal him to the Warriors in exchange for the third pick, Philadelphia's Jim Lynam angrily threatened Orlando, saying he would draft Hardaway.

That, in turn, angered Orlando, which set a huge amount of stock on Hardaway because of the entry into the game of O'Neal, who spent much of last week playing hoops with Hardaway in Southern California.

"We did what we had to do to ensure that we'd get the guy we wanted," Lynam said.

With his threat in place, the Magic accepted the three draft picks and proceeded.

"The trade wasn't necessarily for Chris Webber," said Warriors Coach Don Nelson. "It was to get either of the two big players in the draft. We were not in control of who we were going to get until we knew who the second pick was.

"In any case, we were going to give the three picks for either play-Meanwhile, Webber accepted his role as the first pick, then sat back and waited anxiously. In his mind was the memory of what it had been like when he visited Oakland earlier in June.

"When we got on the plane in Oakland," Webber said, "I said to my father, 'When Coach Nelson said, "See you later," he said it real cynically, like he really was going to see us later.' I had a feeling that it would be a possibility."

Will have a few driver entries in the up and coming SCCA Grand Prix Races in Des Moines on July 9, 10, 11. Celtics impressed with Earl's desire

Not long after Iowa's Acie Earl was drafted by Boston Wednesday night, Turner Network Television rolled some highlights.

Earl was the man in focus, but Iowa Coach Tom Davis noticed the background. There, patrolling the baseline, was Chris Street.

"It still hurts," Davis said.

Street, Iowa's power forward from Indianola, was killed Jan. 19 in an automobile accident outside Iowa City.

"The reality is that it is on everyone's mind," Davis said. "You can't hide from it. I don't think we'd want to forget. He'll always have a special place in our memory. We just have to remember the good times and go from

One of the reasons Boston took Earl is that Celtics personnel were impressed with his growth after Street's death.

"He's never been hungry to get to the next level until this past year," said Rick Weitzman, Boston's chief scout. "I think a lot had to do with the death of Street. This matured him and gave him the hunger he needed."

Sports agent wins appeal

Chicago, Ill. (AP) — Prosecutors must decide whether to retry a former New York-based sports agent after an appeals court panel overturned his mail fraud conviction.

A three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday in favor of Norby Walters, who pleaded guilty to a mail fraud charge last year and was sentenced to 18 months in prison. But Walters' plea agreement allowed him to appeal the decision before serving any time.

The government accused Walters and Lloyd Bloom of persuading college athletes, including former lo football players Ronnie Harmon and Devon Mitchell, to sign as clients in violation of NCAA rules. Those rules prohibit athletes from signing until their eligibility expires. The mail fraud occurred when Walters and Bloom sent false student claims of NCAA eligibility through the mail, officials had said. But the court ruled it was unclear if Walters had any knowledge of the mailings.
