Committee says two ex-Hawks paid by agent

IOWA CITY (AP) - A University of Iowa committee says two former Iowa football players received money from a sports agent while playing for Iowa, but there is no evidence of any other players being involved.

The committee was formed in March to look into reports that former Hawkeye running back Ronnie Harmon took payments from agent Norby Walters while playing for lowa.

The three-member committee in a report released Wednesday identified the players only as "Student A" and "Student B." .

University President James O. Freedman organized the committee after published reports said Harmon received up to $54,000 from Walters in 1984 and 1985. Harmon now plays for the National Football League's Buffalo Bills.

At a news conference to release the report, university law professor David Vernon identified "Student A" as Harmon. Devon Mitchell is believed to be "Student B".

No evidence was found that other Iowa athletes had received payments said. Another former football player told the committee that he had been approached by more than 100 agents during his junior year, the report

"In light of the reports from only three former student-athletes, it is apparent that the problem of agents competing for representational rights is a major one, and one that the University of Iowa, and other universities, must deal with if college football is not to suffer a severe blow," the report said.

Harmon received at least four payments from Walters totalling $1,000 and the other player received payments totalling $575, the committee found.

No other evidence of payment was found, said Vernon, a member of the committee investigating the allega-

"The only thing we found involved the specific amount reported," he

THE PAYMENTS were uncovered in records of money orders, Vernon said. The report, given to Freedman last week, said a more extensive search of money order records is needed to find out if other athletes received payments from Walters.

"We found no evidence that any member of the athletic department, administrator or coach knew or had reason to know that improper payments were being made to the two players," the report said.

Under NCAA rules, the school would be subject to severe sanctions if coaches or administrators had known of the payments and allowed the players to compete, the report said. The sanctions could have included giving up the money Iowa earned from playing in the 1966 Rose Bowl game, the report said.

NCAA rules forbid an athlete from agreeing to be represented by an agent until after he plays in his last college game, including post-season

The rules specifically forbid player-agent agreements which do not go into effect until after the last game. Newspaper reports in March said a contract Harmon signed with Walters was post-dated until after the Rose Bowl game.

The committee tried to talk to Harmon but could not reach him.

"We tried to get through to him by phone," Vernon said. "We tried very hard. The effort failed. We got no response.

"We went through the same format trying to get in touch with student B and were unable to do so," the law professor said. "So we did not talk to student B either. Student A being Harmon."

THE COMMITTEE did not try to talk to Walters, Vernon said.

Harmon has not commented on the allegations or on a breach-of-contract suit filed against him in New York by Walters and New Yorkbased agent Lloyd Bloom. The suit says Harmon severed a contract with the agents a few days before signing with the Bills for a reported $1:4 million. Attorney Martin Rauch of Buffalo. N.Y., who now represents Harmon, was out of town Wednesday and did not return messages left with his secretary.

Vernon said the committee had investigated reports that Harmon received a loan for a Mercedes 560 SEC while at Iowa. Harmon did not See MONEY

Agreeing with Knight may be dangerous

I find myself on dangerous ground. It's not like there was a funnel cloud on the horizon.

I'm talking morals, and I'm not even running for president.

Here, for what it is worth, is my complete confession. I agree with BobKnight on a Big Ten Conference basketball issue. Worse, that puts me in opposition to the position taken by Iowa's Dr. Tom Davis.

It is not that I respect Davis less or like Knight more. It's just that I hate to see the Big Ten forfeit its class as a conference of academic institutions who support basketball teams for some of their gifted jumping and running students in favor of the flock of television bucks a post-season tournament will bring them.

This is beside the point, I think, but I even agree with Knight's contention that the move may not prove to be as financially lucrative as it appears on the surface, especially if it scuttles considerable interest in the league's unique and prestigious 18-game round robin regular season schedule.

There's only one thing a postseason tournament can do for the Big Ten if it doesn't make a lot of money and that's help it qualify its fourth or fifth (or worse) best team for the NCAA tournament as the conference tournament champion.

The mantle of class the Big Ten seems willing to shed will be eagerly and readily grabbed by another conference in the Midwest that, at the moment, seems the more enlightened of the two.

The AMCU-8 League of which Northern Iowa is a member hasdecided to discontinue its annual post-season tournament when the league assumes as early as next season one of the NCAAtournament's automatic qualifying berths.

That won't prevent the NCAA from selecting more than one AMCU-8 team for the tournament, just as it has regularly done in the Big Ten, but it will assure that the conference's champion is recognized as such when the tournament starts.

THE UNI AND Iowa baseball teams played as exciting a doubleheader as you are likely to see earlier this week when they split two extra inning games on a beautiful, sunny, almost calm day on the-Panthers' diamond.

I can't say that, as a result of the split, everyone went home happy. Iowa Coach Duane Banks reiterated his displeasure with his team'sperformance to the press after the game as well as loudly and clearly from the dugout at various intervals during the contests.

I wasn't too happy, either. I was reminded there are lots of problems with college baseball other than the designated hitter rule.

They share the DH withprofessional baseball, as poor an excuse for its existance as I can think

They even go one crazy step further. They have what I think must considered a paraphernaliarunner. That is to say they put in a baserunner every time the catcher gets on base so that he has time to put his paraphernalia on to start the next

Bucks play better but still not good enough for win

BOSTON (AP) — Milwaukee played much better than it did the night before. Unfortunately for the Bucks, so did Boston's Danny Ainge.

His deadly outside shooting kept the Boston Celtics in Wednesday night's playoff game until they could win it in the final minute 126-124. Despite their improvement, the Bucks trudge home trailing the bestof-seven NBA series 2-0.

"We're going before a favorable crowd," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "If we play the caliber of ball we played tonight. we'll have a chance."

Especially if Ainge doesn't play in Friday night's third game the way he played in Game 2.

Boston's guard hit just one of nine shots and scored four points in a 111-98 victory in Tuesday night's opener in which Milwaukee shot poorly and handled the ball careless-

Jackson says NFL and baseball are tied for last place NEW YORK (AP) - The Rev. 1988, said the Chicago meeting would Jesse Jackson says major league baseball and the National Football League are tied for last place in the hiring of minorities for top management positions.

"They both have zero," Jackson said Wednesday after meeting with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to discuss an affirmative action plan for pro football.

Jackson, who had a similar meeting Tuesday with baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, said there are no black managers in the major leagues, no black head coaches in the NFL and no black general managers or owners in either sport.

"It's time to break down racial barriers in the front office." Jackson said. "Football has an expansion policy and a television policy. Now it needs an affirmative action policy."

Rozelle's office released a brief statement following the one-hour meeting.

"The NFL recognizes its responsibility in the area of minority hiring." Rozelle said. "While our work is unfinished, we feel gains have been made. We appreciate and welcome Rev. Jackson's ideas on the issue.

JACKSON SAID a group of black and Hispanic former athletes will meet in Chicago May 29 to discuss ways to increase minority hiring in professional baseball and football. Jackson, who sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984 and is considering another bid in focus on minorities who are qualified and interested in front-office jobs.

"We're talking about all kinds of positions, from coaches and commentators to scouts and owners," he

Jackson said former slugger Hank Aaron will line up the baseball play? ers and former Pittsburgh Steeler defensive back Mel Blount will organize the football players. Jackson, said Rozelle and Ueberroth have been invited to attend.

The lack of blacks and other minorities in sports management has been a hot issue since April 6. when Los Angeles Dodgers executive A Campanis said on national television that blacks may lack "some of the necessities" to be managers or general managers. Campanis resigned under pressure a few days later.

"In a real sense, Campanis pulled the scab off a cancer." Jackson said. "He said what a lot of people were thinking."

ON TUESDAY, Jackson called for picketing of major league ballparks on July 4 if baseball doesn't come up with a "coherent plan" to hire more minorities.

Jackson said Wednesday that similar action might be taken during. the football season if the NFL doesn't approve a similar affirmative action plan. But he said he hopes that won't be necessary.

"It would be much better if they do it voluntarily rather than face a court suit and be forced to do it." he said.

Davis' home runs help Cubs outscore Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, with the help of two homers by Jody Davis, outscored the high-scoring San Francisco Giants. "We've had a lot of well-pitched games. About the only trouble we've had is putting runs on the scoreboard. A lot of our homers have come in bunches," Davis said after Wednesday night's 9-4 victory, the Cubs' ninth in 11 road games this season.

"In some games, we've had no other runs other than on homers. Manager Gene Michael said.

Winning pitcher Scott Sanderson. 2-0, allowed seven hits, including two homers by Candy Maldonado and one by Bob Melvin, before leaving in the eighth inning. Lee Smith finished up for his seventh save.

The Giants had totaled 33 hits in their last two games, beating St. Louis 10-7 and 10-6.

But, although the Giants outhomered the Cubs 3-2 and

"We weren't supposed to win this game, I think," Manager Roger Craig concluded. Davis raised his home run total to seven. The Cubs, leading the Na fifth off Minton. The Giants got two runs in the sixth when Maldonado and Melvin both hit their fifth homers of the season.

The Cubs moved safely ahead with three runs in the ninth, including two on a single by Andre Dawson, who raised his RBI total to 27 and tied Cincinnati's Eric Davis for the league lead.

It's final: Brown staying

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) - University of Kansas basketball Coach Larry Brown has said it is final decision to stay with the Jayhawks.

"I am staying at the University of Kansas," Brown Wednesday to quiet talk that he will become head coach of the New York Knicks. "It is final." After published reports Tuesday that he had given the Knicks a Friday deadline to make him a firm offer to coach the Knicks. Brown had issued a statement Tuesday in which he said he would not decide what to do until a new Kansas athletic director was chosen to succeed Monte Johnson, who resigned in March. "I don't think anyone fully understood my statement yesterday." Brown said Wednesday. "I don't want to put a new athletic director in that kind of position.

(meet record)

And that brings up college baseball's third most seriousproblem, after the DH and the PR: the aluminum bat.

College coaches admit the bats will add a few feet to each drive. Basically, however, their estimates are short.

There were eight home runs in the UNI-Iowa doubleheader on a calm day when the scores were arespectable 6-4 in 10 innings and 6-5 in nine. UNI's fences are at an acceptable depth, if the tape measure was accurate. They range up to 390 feet in center field.

Unfortunately, that's no real obstacle for the college hitter and his rod of metal.

BUT EVEN the aluminum bat doesn't always propel a ball clear out of the stadium.

Here were two teams Tuesday, both with winning records this spring. Between them they listed 21 pitchers on their rosters.

Know how many of them had earned run averages of under 6.00 a game? Now, even in the Midwest League, a 6.00 ERA is the credential of a looonggg reliefer ... very long ...

NCAA should propose legislation to purchase the car while playing for lowa, Vernon said.

The university does not expect disciplinary action from the Big Ten conference or the NCAA because the school conducted the internal investigation and because the committee found that coaches and administrators did not know of the payments, Iowa Athletic Director Chalmers "Bump" Elliott said.

The committee could not force people to talk to them and some people declined to be interviewed. All athletic staff members and coaches agreed to be interviewed. Vernon said. "We interviewed all the coaches in private interviews, starting with Coach (Hayden) Fry all the way down," Vernon said.

THE COMMITTEE said the university will try to determine if it should file suit against Walters and urged the Big Ten to contemplate legal action against the agents.

The university, the Big Ten and the make it a crime for sports agents to interfere with the careers of college athletes, the committee said.

"There are two things I think we want to try to do," Vernon said. "One is to deter student athletes from being enticed that way. And the other is to deter people like Norby Walters from using the University of Iowa as a hunting ground for clients."

Vernon said about 30 people were interviewed in the committee's investigation.

The report said Iowa athletes repeatedly are told that it is against Big Ten and NCAA rules to sign a contract with an agent or take money while still playing college sports and that athletic officials watch to see if an athlete suddenly comes into a lot of money. University Vice President Dorsey D. Ellis said the school could not give the athletes' names because of a federal law prohibiting the release of records of current or former students.

Indians fall to last place PEORIA, III. - The Waterloo Indians tumbled to last place in the Central Division and moved on to face Southern Division leading Springfield today after suffering its sixth straight road loss and eighth in the past nine road games here Wednesday night.

Peoria scored an unearned run in the last of the sixth inning and made it stand up for a 3-2 victory to sweep the three-game series from the Indians. It marked the first time ever that Peoria has won four straight games from the Indians. The Chiefs won the final game of a two-game series in Waterloo earlier in the

The Indians took a 1-0 lead in the second on a double by Scott Johnson, a passed ball and a sacrifice fly by Tom Lampkin. Kelly Mann doubled in two runs as Peoria got three of its nine hits in the fourth inning to go ahead, 2-1. In the sixth, Brad Wolten was safe on an error by third baseman Butch Garcia, moved to third on Claudio Carrasco's second hit of the game and scored on a throwing error. A walk, a single, an error and an infield out produced what proved to be Peoria's winning run. Shawn Boskie, now 2-3, and his reliever, David Rosario, limited

Waterloo to five hits. The Indians got only 13 hits in the three-game series

John Githens allowed seven hits during his six innings of pitching for Waterloo and sustained his third loss without a victory.
